Britain Determined To Hold Singapore

Hitlerized Germany Forced To Swallow First Defeat Dose

Interpretation By

Kirke L. Simpson

(Wide World War Analyst)

Whatever the truth of widely rumored serious dissension between Hitler and high command elements of his army, there is no question that Hitlerized Germany is being forced to swallow its first bitter dose of defeat in this war.

It is being meted out to them in Russia on a scale that has silenced even the "according to plan" cliche of Hitler headquarters. And in Libya shattered fragments of a once powerful axis desert army are again in retreat westward.

Grave as is the plight of American-Filipino forces still battling Japanese invaders on Luzon and of Britain's great Singapore base, the axis tri-partite pact has failed again. It was designed by the German master minds, who conceived the Berlin-Tokyo-Rome fellowship, to immobilize America as an anti-axis supply base, or, failing that, to concentrate American war activities in the Pacific. It was intended to counter the lease-lend program and American "shoot-on-sight" patrol of the western Atlantic. All Nazi machinations which lured Tokyo into the struggle that black day in December now have proved futile. The war in the Pacific definitely has not given Hitler the breathing spell he hoped for in Russia or in North Africa. It has not diverted American attention or even mounting help for axis foes on those fronts.

It has not forced Britain to suspend her attack in Libya while she rushed aid to Singapore. It has not halted British counter bombing across the English channel and over Germany, but only insured ultimate united nation air mastery in Europe as well as in the Far East.

That was the meaning of President Roosevelt's stupendous new war program laid before a congress already busy with shaping swiftly its legis-

ARGUE AGAINST CHRISTENBERRY

Clean Government Group Protests Appointment As Attorney

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—A senate judiciary subcommittee undertook today to determine the fitness of Herbert W. Christenberry to be federal district attorney at New Orleans, during a several-hour session devoted mainly to arguments between opponents of the nomination and members of the committee.

Sam Ballard, president of the Louisiana Association for Clean Government, and James J. Morrison, association attorney, repeatedly were admonished by Chairman McFarland, Democrat, Arizona, and Subcommittee Members Senators O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, and Austin, Republican, Vermont, for failure to produce "personal knowledge" testimony in their opposition to senate confirmation of Christenberry.

T. Semmes Walmsley, former mayor of New Orleans, now connected with the office of civilian defense, was the day's principal witness, but at the request of Ballard and Morrison, the committee agreed to summon O. John Rogge, former assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal defense, to appear Monday morning.

Rogge conducted the investigation for the department of justice into political cases in Louisiana a few years ago. Morrison told the commit-

LEVINE ACCUSED OF AIDING ALIEN

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Charles A. Levine, who flew the Atlantic as a passenger in 1927, was arraigned today before United States Commissioner Isaac Platt on a complaint filed against him in Los Angeles charging he aided and abetted the illegal entry of an alien into this country and harbored him.

Levine was arrested on a removal complaint requested by the United States attorney at Los Angeles where immigration agents declared he helped bring into the country a German citizen said to be Edgar Schinck, alias Edward Siegel.

Federal agents said Levine conspired with Peter Walter to bring Schinck across the Mexican border. Levine denied the charges, waived removal proceedings and was held in $1,000 bond. Schinck and Walter, the agents said, were under arrest in Los Angeles.

Assistant United States Attorney Russel Lambeau in Los Angeles said Schinck had pleaded guilty to charges of illegal entry at Laredo, Tex., May 30, and Walter had pleaded guilty to smuggling charges.

To get Schinck across the border, Lambeau said, Levine supplied a letter saying the German was in business and was an acquaintance, and Walter furnished the birth certificate of an American, Edward Siegel of Los Angeles. Schinek posed as Siegel, Lambeau added.

Britain grimly swore its "absolute determination" to defend Singapore and "other vital areas" today as its troops fought an apparently losing battle for Kuala Lumpur, crude rubber center 180 miles north of Singapore.

General Sir Henry R. Pownall, British commander at the British naval base in Malaya, told defenders in a broadcast tonight that there were days of bitter struggle ahead but that Britain and her allies were not idle.

"We are engaged," he said, upon the task of holding "the enemy from vital areas and as far from them as possible while we renew, regroup and supplement our forces."

The Japanese meanwhile claimed the capture of Kuala Lumpur after the British reportedly abandoned it and Japanese forces came in from the rear. The report was not confirmed by British sources. The British did concede that their front along the Slim river, 200 miles from Singapore, had been broken after the Japanese suddenly began appearing with 12-ton tanks.

There was an ominous silence from the Philippines which some Washington observers calculated was the prelude to a double Japanese attack upon United States forces on the island of Luzon and an invasion of the Dutch East Indies.

Japanese ship concentrations have been reported off the island of Mindanao, the southernmost of the large Philippine islands and a logical jumping-off place for an attack on the Dutch, while Japanese reinforcements were also reported moving in northward on the island of Luzon where the army of General Douglas MacArthur is holed in.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Amid persistent reports that President Roosevelt plans reorganization of the military production and supply setup, congressional circles heard today that Associate Justice James F. Byrnes of the supreme court might be asked to undertake coordination of this phase of the war effort.

Mr. Roosevelt's reluctance to ask the former South Carolina senator to step down from the high court, to which he was named last June 12, was said to have stayed any decision on the question temporarily. Some well informed legislators professed to believe that because of this the president might, if he chose to act at all, merely "borrow" the justice temporarily to aid in revamping the production organization.

JOINS ARMY AFTER JAPS KILL HIS SON

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Claude Bridger Watson, 47, of Bradenton, Fla., surmounted the first hurdle today in his plan to settle a personal score with the Japs.

Watson, whose only son, Claude, Jr., was killed during the sneak Japanese attack upon Honolulu, passed his physical examination at the Jacksonville navy recruiting office.

He has been busy recruiting the "Bridger Watson, Jr., Volunteers" for the navy since receiving news of his son's death and followed up by enlisting himself. He was accepted despite his age because of three and a half years' service in naval aviation during the first World war.

"I feel I owe my country a debt," Watson declared, "and I want to pay it in Jap eyes. I'm on my way to do it, too."

Chinese Forces Open Offensives Against Japanese

Action Furnishes Bright News For Nations Fighting Nipponese

By Carl C. Cramer

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(Wide World)—The "Chinese incident," which developed a war front as long as Germany's in Russia and which now has merged into a world conflict, today furnishes the brightest news for the united nations fighting Japan.

At vital spots all along a 2,000-mile front, from Mongolia to Burma, the troops of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek are on the move in something resembling a general offensive after four years and a half of a bloody, down-hill war.

The Japanese are in much the same situation as Germany in Russia.

The Chinese, who claim to have inflicted 2,000,000 casualties upon the Japanese army in four years and a half, appear no more willing than the Russians to give the axis a breathing space.

With a trained and seasoned army of anywhere from 4,000,000 to 6,000,000 men drawn from the great reservoir of China's 400,000,000 population, General Chiang in the past week has sprung offensives in four main areas.

One of these is aimed at Canton in the south. Another is directed at Hankow from three positions arranged semi-circularly about the great

BLANCAND QUITS STATE POSITION

Also Resigns As American Legion Commander To Fight Maestri

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Gus Blancand resigned today as director of state institutions because, he said, he wanted to do what he could to defeat Mayor Robert S. Maestri in the city's Democratic primary of January 27.

Blancand made public his letter of resignation to Governor Sam H. Jones in which he declared that "the importance of the city campaign has greatly impressed me and the necessity of bringing about the defeat of Maestri seems vital to the cause of honest and efficient government in the city and state.

"To permit him to conquer and occupy the free citizenry of New Orleans as he has the Old Regular organization will lead, I fear, to the creation of a new state hierarchy which will dwarf the old state regime which he fathered and financed in 1928 which brought such devastation to our city and state.

"This must be prevented and I want to do my humble share in stopping this power and money-mad autocrat before he gains momentum. I can do this as an independent citizen better than as a legion commander or an appointee of the state. I have resigned from the commandership of the local American Legion post No. 125, and I herewith tender my resignation as director of institutions."

Blancand was appointed by Jones on September 2 last year as assistant to J. E. Snee, then director of state institutions. Blancand was made director shortly afterward when Snee resigned the post.

WALL OPENS WAR ON POLITICAL FOE

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Roland B. Wall, arch political foe of Seanator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, today opened his campaign for the United States senate in the August primary with a blistering letter directed to Bilbo and the statement he was out to eliminate "Bilboism once and for all from Mississippi."

"War is declared. The fight is on, look out, Mr. Bilbo, here I come," Wall said in his letter to Bilbo dated January 6, which was his opening gun in what is expected to be one of the most turbulent political battles in recent state history.

The campaign is for the seat now held by Senator Wall Doxey, elected last September with Bilbo's support, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Pat Harrison in June, 1941. Doxey's term expires at the end of this year and he is expected to stand for reelection.

SOMEWHERE ON THE GERMAN FRONTIER, Jan. 10.—The Nazi leadership has taken extraordinary measures to deny reports of incipient revolution within the Reich, advices to this border point disclosed tonight.

These measures—including the awakening of foreign correspondents in the middle of the night to inform them of the rumors and the foreign office denials—came at a time when Adolf Hitler's own press chief and all the German newspapers were acknowledging the gravity of the military situation in Russia.

The admissions, coupled with appeals for a renewal of faith in the Fuehrer, showed that the winter campaign in Russia is written off by the German leaders as lost.

In every available quarter, meanwhile, the German army launched a recruiting drive in the hope of building a fresh force for the planned spring offensive. Highly reliable advices said that because of German losses and the need for a far greater army in any new push, this drive

UNANIMOUS WAR MAY BE CALLED

Delegates who have already arrived said it would be necessary to clarify two points.

1. Whether the United States wants the nations to declare war.
2. Whether all the South American nations are willing to do so.

FARM BLOC WINS IN PRICE FIGHT

Senate Passes Control Bill Allowing Up To 25 Per Cent Gains

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The administration's wartime price control legislation emerged from a weary senate today so much amended by its farm bloc that Democratic Leader Barkley, Kentucky, called it a "farm relief bill."

The vote on passage was 83 to 1 with Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, casting the only dissenting tally. Beforehand, however, the farm bloc, in a 55 to 31 division, had succeeded in writing in a series of restrictions on ceilings over agricultural products with the result, administration men said, that many farm commodities were left free to rise 25 per cent or more above present levels.

The far-reaching and complicated measure—intended to help prevent inflation and sky-rocketing living costs—now goes back to the house. A senate-house conference committee is expected to be appointed to redraft important sections before the measure comes up for final consideration.

When the bill passed the house last month with a provision allowing sharp increases in farm prices the word was passed around that President Roosevelt would veto it if it reached him in that form.

The senate banking committee knocked out the house farm provision objectionable to the administration, but the senate went beyond the house in approving restrictions on farm price-fixing.

With the farm bloc in complete control, the senate adopted 55 to 31 an amendment by Senator O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, providing:

White Military Police Shoot 3 Negro Soldiers

ALEXANDRIA, La., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Captain Houston Green of the state police said that three negro soldiers were shot here tonight in a street clash between white military police and negro soliders.

Green said two of the soldiers were believed to be in a serious condition.

The officer reported that a white military policeman arrested a negro soldier and that the latter's companions jumped in and beat up the policeman.

Green said that when about 100 state police, city officers and parish officials reached the scene, in a negro residential district, about 400 to 500 negro soldiers had congregated.

Military police quickly rounded them up and carried them to nearby army camps where they were stationed.

Military authorities were not immediately available for comment.

Alexandria's chief of police, George C. Gray, termed it a "pay night row" which grew to large proportions before being quelled in "about half an hour."

At least four or five negroes required hospitalization "due to bullet wounds, glass and tear gas," Chief Gray said.

The military police shot the three soldiers wounded by bullets, civilian authorities declared, with the state police and city officers only firing into the air.

The riot started in the negro district, Chief of Police Gray declared. There were about 2,000 negroes present, not all of them taking part in the disorders, he said.

WISCONSIN FIRE LOSS $2,250,000

SUPERIOR, Wis., Jan. 10.—(AP)—A raging fire, against which firemen fought vainly in 12 degrees below zero weather, destroyed a huge elevator and 1,500,000 bushels of grain today and for hours threatened the defense-vital Superior ore and wheat dock area.

Officials estimated the damage at $2,250,000. The grain was valued at one dollar a bushel, the elevator at $750,000. The loss was covered by insurance.

Two explosions touched off the fire in elevator X of the Great Northern railroad. Although sabotage was considered as a possibility—four separate investigations were begun—reports from elevator guards stressed the likelihood of grain dust basts.

Seven men and five employes were injured in the explosions, felt several miles away. Although three were hurled more than 100 feet, none of the men was hurt critically.

Fire Chief Edward Nelson threw every available man into the fight to prevent spread of the flames, which at times leaped 200 feet into the air. It soon became apparent that the elevator was doomed, so efforts were directed at saving four adjacent elevators, docks and a 16,000,000-gallon gasoline storage depot.

Nelson said the huge pile of grain probably would smoulder for at least a week.

ROONEY MARRIED TO AVA GARDNER

Biggest Box Office Star Weds Girl From North Carolina

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Mickey Rooney, the son of vaudeville comedians who became the movies' biggest box office star, and a shy, blue-eyed North Carolina girl, Ava Gardner, were married today in the town of Ballard, 40 miles distant.

Only a few friends witnessed the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Glenn Lutz. The newlyweds left immediately by automobile for Del Monte, Calif.

They had appeared this morning at a hotel in nearby Montecito, to which County Clerk Jack Lewis delivered the marriage license. They applied for it last Monday, Mickey under his real name of Joe Yule, Jr. He gave his age as 21, Miss Gardner's as 19.

Mickey, one of Hollywood's most eligible bachelors, met Miss Gardner at a movie party several months ago. Announcement of their engagement shortly before Christmas came as a surprise to most of the film colony.

The daughter of Mrs. J. B. Gardner of Wilson, N. C., Ava crashed the movies in prosaic fashion. A relative submitted her picture to a talent scout. Tests brought her a contract.

APPROVES DAYLIGHT SAVING IN WINTER

By William G. Smock

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The "father of daylight saving time," once bitterly opposed to year-around extension of his pet plan, now is "willing to go alon gwith the president."

Robert Garland, whose campaign was largely responsible for the adoption of daylight saving time in the United States during the first World war, said:

"I'm not particularly stuck on daylight saving time around the calendar but war makes a difference. I'll cheerfully go along with the president. Extension of the plan will save millions of dollars by conserving coal and electricity."

In Washington, the house of representatives has passed a bill providing for daylight saving time and the senate has approved a measure authorizing President Roosevelt to advance the clock as much as two hours whenever he sees fit. A conference committee is expected to effect a compromise plan.

Last fall when daylight saving time ended for the summer in the nation, Garland declared:

"To extend daylight saving time beyond September 28 wouldn't be daylight saving time. It would be foolish. It would make everybody sore. We only want it in the summertime."

But the silver-headed, ruddy-faced industrialist and political leader declared today that things are different since Pearl Harbor. He pointed out that daylight saving time would be an advantage in case of blackouts. He said workers would have an extra hour before darkness to get home and would be less likely to be caught in an air raid.

Thrilling Story Of Escape Is Written By Larry Allen

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Larry Allen came perilously close to never telling this story, the best in his thrilling catalogue of experiences as an eye-witness to every important battle fought by the British fleet in the Medditerranean during this war.

(Word came to the Associated Press on December 16 that Allen, who had survived unscratched the violent German air attack on the British aircraft carrier Illustrious, was in an Alexandria hospital recuperating from oily water he had swallowed and from cuts and bruises suffered in a 45-minute plunge into the sea.

(Now that the British have announced the loss of the cruiser Galatea, he has been permitted to tell the story of the death of a warship and his own narrow escape from death.)

By Larry Allen

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Jan. 10.—(AP)—When the British light cruiser Galatea, stabbed three times in her side by torpedoes, heeled quickly over and sank with a muffled blast, a heroic naval story had just begun.

The Galatea was sunk by a U-boat in the pre-dawn blackness of December 16 only 32 miles off Alexandria.

It was a cold, choppy sea and the lurking menace of the U-boat was always present, but for ten hours British destroyers stuck to the dangerous job of rescuing the cruiser's survivors.

They picked 119 of the Galatea's 580 officers and men out of the oily scum that marked her grave in the sea and one more, myself.

All that time they were trying to find and depth charge the submarine but they never got it.

The submarine had attacked at close range while the Galatea was speeding at 26 knots along with other cruisers and destroyers after fending off a seven-hour attack by axis bombers.

Three torpedoes ripped gaping holes into her portside, aft, amidships and forward near the bow.

There were three vivid flashes of flame, then torrents of water poured into the wounded cruiser. In three minutes she had vanished as if by magic, spraying a huge mass of oil over the sea.

This is the story of those three min-

Germany was reported dipping into the limited manpower of her satellites to bolster her frozen, retreating army on the long Russian front as the Russians claimed the reoccupation of still more populated centers by their uninterrupted offensive.

Reports from the German frontier said Nazi agents were offering high wages for soldiers in Croatia. Other recruiting drives were said to be under way in Bulgaria, other Baltic states and even Norway.

While reports seeped out of unusual Nazi activities to stifle rumors of revolt, many European observers conceded that no organized effort to revolt exists or is likely to exist soon.

Yet foreign correspondents in Berlin were awakened in the middle of the night to take an official denial of revolt in the Reich and Dr. Otto Dietrich, German press chief and a close observer of the United States, told German newspaper readers that German military operations have entered a serious and critical phase.

London reports on the Russian front said that two Russian advances westward from the north and south of Moscow were extending to the point where they were almost ready to meet west of Mozhaisk and trap 100,000 Nazi troops in that town, 57 miles west of the capital. The two advances were 150 miles apart and about 150 miles from Moscow.

Germans appeared preparing to make a stand in the Staritsa-Rzhev area northwest of Moscow and the British said the Vyazma-Bryansk railway line from which the Russians are only 25 miles away, is another likely German holding point.

Despite denials from Berlin and Helsinki reports from Europe insisted

FEDERAL SALES TAX IS LIKELY

Income Levy Bases May Be Lowered To $1,000 And $500

By Donald A. Young

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Members of the house ways and means committee, searching for $7,000,000,000 in new general revenue, appeared to be giving increasing though reluctant attention today to a general sales tax.

A poll of the 25 members showed that only a few were willing at this time to commit themselves to that method of obtaining new funds to help pay for 1942's $56,000,000,000 war program. But many others said they regarded it as a comparatively painless tax that "we may have to come around to."

In asking $7,000,000,000 of new general taxes, in addition to $2,000,000,000 of new social security levies, President Roosevelt said that in the past he had opposed general excise and sales taxes but added:

"In the face of the present financial and economic situation, however, we may be compelled to reconsider the temporary necessity of such measures."

Preliminary suggestions advanced by the treasury, it is understood, have made no mention of a sales tax and have involved chiefly increases in present taxes.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Claude Bridger Watson, 47, of Bradenton, Fla., surmounted the first hurdle today in his plan to settle a personal score with the Japs.

Watson, whose only son, Claude, Jr., was killed during the sneak Japanese attack upon Honolulu, passed his physical examination at the Jacksonville navy recruiting office.

He has been busy recruiting the "Bridger Watson, Jr., Volunteers" for the navy since receiving news of his son's death and followed up by enlisting himself. He was accepted despite his age because of three and a half years' service in naval aviation during the first World war.

"I feel I owe my country a debt," Watson declared, "and I want to pay it in Jap eyes. I'm on my way to do it, too."

Chinese Forces Open Offensives Against Japanese

Action Furnishes Bright News For Nations Fighting Nipponese

By Carl C. Cramer

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(Wide World)—The "Chinese incident," which developed a war front as long as Germany's in Russia and which now has merged into a world conflict, today furnishes the brightest news for the united nations fighting Japan.

At vital spots all along a 2,000-mile front, from Mongolia to Burma, the troops of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek are on the move in something resembling a general offensive after four years and a half of a bloody, down-hill war.

The Japanese are in much the same situation as Germany in Russia.

The Chinese, who claim to have inflicted 2,000,000 casualties upon the Japanese army in four years and a half, appear no more willing than the Russians to give the axis a breathing space.

With a trained and seasoned army of anywhere from 4,000,000 to 6,000,000 men drawn from the great reservoir of China's 400,000,000 population, General Chiang in the past week has sprung offensives in four main areas.

One of these is aimed at Canton in the south. Another is directed at Hankow from three positions arranged semi-circularly about the great

Also Resigns As American Legion Commander To Fight Maestri

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Gus Blancand resigned today as director of state institutions because, he said, he wanted to do what he could to defeat Mayor Robert S. Maestri in the city's Democratic primary of January 27.

Blancand made public his letter of resignation to Governor Sam H. Jones in which he declared that "the importance of the city campaign has greatly impressed me and the necessity of bringing about the defeat of Maestri seems vital to the cause of honest and efficient government in the city and state.

"To permit him to conquer and occupy the free citizenry of New Orleans as he has the Old Regular organization will lead, I fear, to the creation of a new state hierarchy which will dwarf the old state regime which he fathered and financed in 1928 which brought such devastation to our city and state.

"This must be prevented and I want to do my humble share in stopping this power and money-mad autocrat before he gains momentum. I can do this as an independent citizen better than as a legion commander or an appointee of the state. I have resigned from the commandership of the local American Legion post No. 125, and I herewith tender my resignation as director of institutions."

Blancand was appointed by Jones on September 2 last year as assistant to J. E. Snee, then director of state institutions. Blancand was made director shortly afterward when Snee resigned the post.

WALL OPENS WAR ON POLITICAL FOE

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Roland B. Wall, arch political foe of Seanator Theodore G. Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, today opened his campaign for the United States senate in the August primary with a blistering letter directed to Bilbo and the statement he was out to eliminate "Bilboism once and for all from Mississippi."

"War is declared. The fight is on, look out, Mr. Bilbo, here I come," Wall said in his letter to Bilbo dated January 6, which was his opening gun in what is expected to be one of the most turbulent political battles in recent state history.

The campaign is for the seat now held by Senator Wall Doxey, elected last September with Bilbo's support, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Pat Harrison in June, 1941. Doxey's term expires at the end of this year and he is expected to stand for reelection.

Nazis Launch Army Recruiting Drive In Conquered Nations

(By Associated Press)

SOMEWHERE ON THE GERMAN FRONTIER, Jan. 10.—The Nazi leadership has taken extraordinary measures to deny reports of incipient revolution within the Reich, advices to this border point disclosed tonight.

These measures—including the awakening of foreign correspondents in the middle of the night to inform them of the rumors and the foreign office denials—came at a time when Adolf Hitler's own press chief and all the German newspapers were acknowledging the gravity of the military situation in Russia.

The admissions, coupled with appeals for a renewal of faith in the Fuehrer, showed that the winter campaign in Russia is written off by the German leaders as lost.

In every available quarter, meanwhile, the German army launched a recruiting drive in the hope of building a fresh force for the planned spring offensive. Highly reliable advices said that because of German losses and the need for a far greater army in any new push, this drive

UNANIMOUS WAR MAY BE CALLED

Will Be Major Question Before Pan-American Diplomats At Meet

By Henry W. Bagley

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Whether to declare war unanimously on the Axis will be the major question before Pan-America's diplomats when they gather in Brazil's abandoned parliamentary hall five days hence for their most important conference in history.

Delegates who have already arrived said it would be necessary to clarify two points.

1. Whether the United States wants the nations to declare war.
2. Whether all the South American nations are willing to do so.

The dominican republic, typical of the Central American countries which have expressed solidarity with the United States, has announced it would

FARM BLOC WINS IN PRICE FIGHT

Senate Passes Control Bill Allowing Up To 25 Per Cent Gains

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The administration's wartime price control legislation emerged from a weary senate today so much amended by its farm bloc that Democratic Leader Barkley, Kentucky, called it a "farm relief bill."

The vote on passage was 83 to 1 with Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, casting the only dissenting tally. Beforehand, however, the farm bloc, in a 55 to 31 division, had succeeded in writing in a series of restrictions on ceilings over agricultural products with the result, administration men said, that many farm commodities were left free to rise 25 per cent or more above present levels.

The far-reaching and complicated measure—intended to help prevent inflation and sky-rocketing living costs—now goes back to the house. A senate-house conference committee is expected to be appointed to redraft important sections before the measure comes up for final consideration.

When the bill passed the house last month with a provision allowing sharp increases in farm prices the word was passed around that President Roosevelt would veto it if it reached him in that form.

The senate banking committee knocked out the house farm provision objectionable to the administration, but the senate went beyond the house in approving restrictions on farm price-fixing.

With the farm bloc in complete control, the senate adopted 55 to 31 an amendment by Senator O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, providing:

Thrilling Story Of Escape Is Written By Larry Allen

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Larry Allen came perilously close to never telling this story, the best in his thrilling catalogue of experiences as an eye-witnes to every important battle fought by the British fleet in the Medditerranean during this war.

(Word came to the Associated Press on December 16 that Allen, who had survived unscratched the violent German air attack on the British aircraft carrier Illustrious, was in an Alexandria hospital recuperating from oily water he had swallowed and from cuts and bruises suffered in a 45-minute plunge into the sea.

(Now that the British have announced the loss of the cruiser Galatea, he has been permitted to tell the story of the death of a warship and hi sown narrow escape from death.)

By Larry Allen

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Jan. 10.—(AP)—When the British light cruiser Galatea, stabbed three times in her side by torpedoes, heeled quickly over and sank with a muffled blast, a heroic naval story had just begun.

The Galatea was sunk by a U-boat in the pre-dawn blackness of December 16 only 32 miles off Alexandria.

It was a cold, choppy sea and the lurking menace of the U-boat was always present, but for ten hours British destroyers stuck to the dangerous job of rescuing the cruiser's survivors.

They picked 119 of the Galatea's 580 officers and men out of the oily scum that marked her grave in the sea and one more, myself.

All that time they were trying to find and depth charge the submarine but they never got it.

The submarine had attacked at close range while the Galatea was speeding at 26 knots along with other cruisers and destroyers after fending off a seven-hour attack by axis bombers.

Three torpedoes ripped gaping holes into her portside, aft, amidships and forward near the bow.

There were three vivid flashes of flame, then torrents of water poured into the wounded cruiser. In three minutes she had vanished as if by magic, spraying a huge mass of oil over the sea.

This is the story of those three min-

White Military Police Shoot 3 Negro Soldiers

ALEXANDRIA, La., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Captain Houston Green of the state police said that three negro soldiers were shot here tonight in a street clash between white military police and negro soliders.

Green said two of the soldiers were believed to be in a serious condition.

The officer reported that a white military policeman arrested a negro soldier and that the latter's companions jumped in and beat up the policeman.

Green said that when about 100 state police, city officers and parish officials reached the scene, in a negro residential district, about 400 to 500 negro soldiers had congregated.

Military police quickly rounded them up and carried them to nearby army camps where they were stationed.

Military authorities were not immediately available for comment.

Alexandria's chief of police, George C. Gray, termed it a "pay night row" which grew to large proportions before being quelled in "about half an hour."

At least four or five negroes required hospitalization "due to bullet wounds, glass and tear gas," Chief Gray said.

The military police shot the three soldiers wounded by bullets, civilian authorities declared, with the state police and city officers only firing into the air.

The riot started in the negro district, Chief of Police Gray declared. There were about 2,000 negroes present, not all of them taking part in the disorders, he said.

WISCONSIN FIRE LOSS $2,250,000

SUPERIOR, Wis., Jan. 10.—(AP)—A raging fire, against which firemen fought vainly in 12 degrees below zero weather, destroyed a huge elevator and 1,500,000 bushels of grain today and for hours threatened the defense-vital Superior ore and wheat dock area.

Officials estimated the damage at $2,250,000. The grain was valued at one dollar a bushel, the elevator at $750,000. The loss was covered by insurance.

Two explosions touched off the fire in elevator X of the Great Northern railroad. Although sabotage was considered as a possibility—four separate investigations were begun—reports from elevator guards stressed the likelihood of grain dust basts.

Seven men and five employes were injured in the explosions, felt several miles away. Although three were hurled more than 100 feet, none of the men was hurt critically.

Fire Chief Edward Nelson threw every available man into the fight to prevent spread of the flames, which at times leaped 200 feet into the air. It soon became apparent that the elevator was doomed, so efforts were directed at saving four adjacent elevators, docks and a 16,000,000-gallon gasoline storage depot.

Nelson said the huge pile of grain probably would smoulder for at least a week.

ROONEY MARRIED TO AVA GARDNER

Biggest Box Office Star Weds Girl From North Carolina

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Mickey Rooney, the son of vaudeville comedians who became the movies' biggest box office star, and a shy, blue-eyed North Carolina girl, Ava Gardner, were married today in the town of Ballard, 40 miles distant.

Only a few friends witnessed the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Glenn Lutz. The newlyweds left immediately by automobile for Del Monte, Calif.

They had appeared this morning at a hotel in nearby Montecito, to which County Clerk Jack Lewis delivered the marriage license. They applied for it last Monday, Mickey under his real name of Joe Yule, Jr. He gave his age as 21, Miss Gardner's as 19.

Mickey, one of Hollywood's most eligible bachelors, met Miss Gardner at a movie party several months ago. Announcement of their engagement shortly before Christmas came as a surprise to most of the film colony.

The daughter of Mrs. J. B. Gardner of Wilson, N. C., Ava crashed the movies in prosaic fashion. A relative submitted her picture to a talent scout. Tests brought her a contract.

APPROVES DAYLIGHT SAVING IN WINTER

By William G. Smock

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The "father of daylight saving time," once bitterly opposed to year-around extension of his pet plan, now is "willing to go alon gwith the president."

Robert Garland, whose campaign was largely responsible for the adoption of daylight saving time in the United States during the first World war, said:

"I'm not particularly stuck on daylight saving time around the calendar but war makes a difference. I'll cheerfully go along with the president. Extension of the plan will save millions of dollars by conserving coal and electricity."

In Washington, the house of representatives has passed a bill providing for daylight saving time and the senate has approved a measure authorizing President Roosevelt to advance the clock as much as two hours whenever he sees fit. A conference committee is expected to effect a compromise plan.

Last fall when daylight saving time ended for the summer in the nation, Garland declared:

"To extend daylight saving time beyond September 28 wouldn't be daylight saving time. It would be foolish. It would make everybody sore. We only want it in the summertime."

But the silver-headed, ruddy-faced industrialist and political leader declared today that things are different since Pearl Harbor. He pointed out that daylight saving time would be an advantage in case of blackouts. He said workers would have an extra hour before darkness to get home and would be less likely to be caught in an air raid.

RUSSIANS HOPE TO TRAP PERHAPS 100,000 GERMANS

Nazis Believed Attempting To Make Stand, Bringing Up Planes

(By Associated Press)

Germany was reported dipping into the limited manpower of her satellites to bolster her frozen, retreating army on the long Russian front as the Russians claimed the reoccupation of still more populated centers by their uninterrupted offensive.

Reports from the German frontier said Nazi agents were offering high wages for soldiers in Croatia. Other recruiting drives were said to be under way in Bulgaria, other Baltic states and even Norway.

While reports seeped out of unusual Nazi activities to stifle rumors of revolt, many European observers conceded that no organized effort to revolt exists or is likely to exist soon.

Yet foreign correspondents in Berlin were awakened in the middle of the night to take an official denial of revolt in the Reich and Dr. Otto Dietrich, German press chief and a close observer of the United States, told German newspaper readers that German military operations have entered a serious and critical phase.

London reports on the Russian front said that two Russian advances westward from the north and south of Moscow were extending to the point where they were almost ready to meet west of Mozhaisk and trap 100,000 Nazi troops in that town, 57 miles west of the capital. The two advances were 150 miles apart and about 150 miles from Moscow.

Germans appeared preparing to make a stand in the Staritsa-Rzhev area northwest of Moscow and the British said the Vyazma-Bryansk railway line from which the Russians are only 25 miles away, is another likely German holding point.

Despite denials from Berlin and Helsinki reports from Europe insisted

FEDERAL SALES TAX IS LIKELY

Income Levy Bases May Be Lowered To $1,000 And $500

By Donald A. Young

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Members of the house ways and means committee, searching for $7,000,000,000 in new general revenue, appeared to be giving increasing though reluctant attention today to a general sales tax.

A poll of the 25 members showed that only a few were willing at this time to commit themselves to that method of obtaining new funds to help pay for 1942's $56,000,000,000 war program. But many others said they regarded it as a comparatively painless tax that "we may have to come around to."

In asking $7,000,000,000 of new general taxes, in addition to $2,000,000,000 of new social security levies, President Roosevelt said that in the past he had opposed general excise and sales taxes but added:

"In the face of the present financial and economic situation, however, we may be compelled to reconsider the temporary necessity of such measures."

Preliminary suggestions advanced by the treasury, it is understood, have made no mention of a sales tax and have involved chiefly increases in present taxes.

BIDDLE REQUESTS AID OF OFFICERS

Attorney General Urges Monroe Police To Carry Out Proclamations

Monroe police were urged in a letter from the attorney general to assist the department of justice in carrying out President Roosevelt's proclamation of December 7 and 8 that alien enemies should not possess radio transmitting sets, short-wave radio receiving sets, or cameras, Chief B. L. Brantley announced Saturday.

Mr. Biddle in his letter declared that "your assistance is urgently needed to make it possible to take up from alien enemies with the promptness and efficiency which is essential the prohibited articles which they now possess. There is no other group of public officers in the country so well qualified to carry out this work. For this reason I request that the officers in charge of the police in every area of the country (including the 48 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands) immediately arrange to provide at such police stations, barracks, or other convenient places, facilities for receiving the prohibited radio sets and cameras from alien enemies."

The attorney general urged all police officers to use care to assist the aliens in complying with the regulations, since most of those affected "are law-abiding and loyal to our government."

Five hundred and seventy-one families received food from the negro community welfare organization, the only negro agency in the Community Chest, the annual report revealed. Headquarters are at the Martin Temple church.

The group has served jointly with the cooperation of other chest agencies in aiding negroes in the city and state as follows:

Families given food, 571; clothes, 72; transients assisted, 24; visits made by doctors to homes, 39; railroad fare to charity hospitals in Shreveport and New Orleans (half-fare tickets secured through the department of public welfare), 33.

Transportation [illegible] car to Monroe Charity Hospital of persons for treatment, 41; jobs secured for unemployed, 111; investigations made, 312; prescriptions filled or refilled, 216; contacting relatives, 41.

Two hundred and fifty-nine negro families received large bags of food and some clothing for Christmas through the cooperation of the Good Fellows, the Salvation Army, the Bancroft Bag and Paper Company and private citizens.

Irvine Garland Penn, director, in making the report said:

"We are greatly appreciative of the very fine support given the negro race by our loyal white people. We also appreciate the fine cooperation that the negro Community Welfare program has received from the Louisiana State Department of Public Welfare, the Salvation Army, the American Red Cross, the Maternity Clinic, Cripple Children's Clinic, Monroe Charity Hospital, St. Francis Sanitarium, the Monroe Social Exchange, the Morning World and News-Star, KMLB radio staff, and the Martin Temple Colored Methodist Episcopal Church for donation of all office space, its ministry and equipment."

BIDDLE REQUESTS AID OF OFFICERS

Attorney General Urges Monroe Police To Carry Out Proclamations

Monroe police were urged in a letter from the attorney general to assist the department of justice in carrying out President Roosevelt's proclamation of December 7 and 8 that alien enemies should not possess radio transmitting sets, short-wave radio receiving sets, or cameras, Chief B. L. Brantley announced Saturday.

Mr. Biddle in his letter declared that "your assistance is urgently needed to make it possible to take up from alien enemies with the promptness and efficiency which is essential the prohibited articles which they now possess. There is no other group of public officers in the country so well qualified to carry out this work. For this reason I request that the officers in charge of the police in every area of the country (including the 48 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands) immediately arrange to provide at such police stations, barracks, or other convenient places, facilities for receiving the prohibited radio sets and cameras from alien enemies."

The attorney general urged all police officers to use care to assist the aliens in complying with the regulations, since most of those affected "are law-abiding and loyal to our government."

CHINESE LAUNCH DRIVES ON JAPS

Yangtze river port—Changsha, Nanchang and from northeast of Ichang. A third has been on the Yellow river front in the Chengchow area. The fourth was in Inner Mongolia in the area of Paotow, the farthest west outpost of the Japanese in that far northern area.

In addition Chiang has sent unspecified numbers of his crack troops into Burma to bolster the British positions on that flank of the Japanese drive toward Singapore.

Commanders of the united nations' forces are bound to watch these moves with the closest attention, for they may provide the means to bomb Tokyo.

China's great manpower, armed by the arsenals of America and perhaps spearheaded by American air force and tank force, may provide the land offensive against Japan. President Roosevelt has emphasized that there was no limitation on where American forces would operate.

From China may come the initiative which may be just sufficient at the present time to tie up and paralyze enough Japanese forces to prevent their winning at Singapore.

Surprising success already has been scored, according to Chinese communiques. Chinese troops, which never have been operating much farther than 30 or 40 miles from Canton, are reported to have fought their way into that city's suburbs in two places.

Likewise on the central front, the Chinese are reported to have made a penetration into Nanchang, 160 miles southeast of Hankow.

About 190 miles south and slightly west of Hankow, the Chinese have scored their third great victory, routing and trapping a force which they estimated at 100,000 and exacting casualties which they place at 30,000 or more.

From the Ichang area, 160 airline miles up the Yangtze river from Hankow, minor success also has been reported. Ichang is 800 miles up the Yangtze from Shanghai and the farthest Japanese penetration into central China.

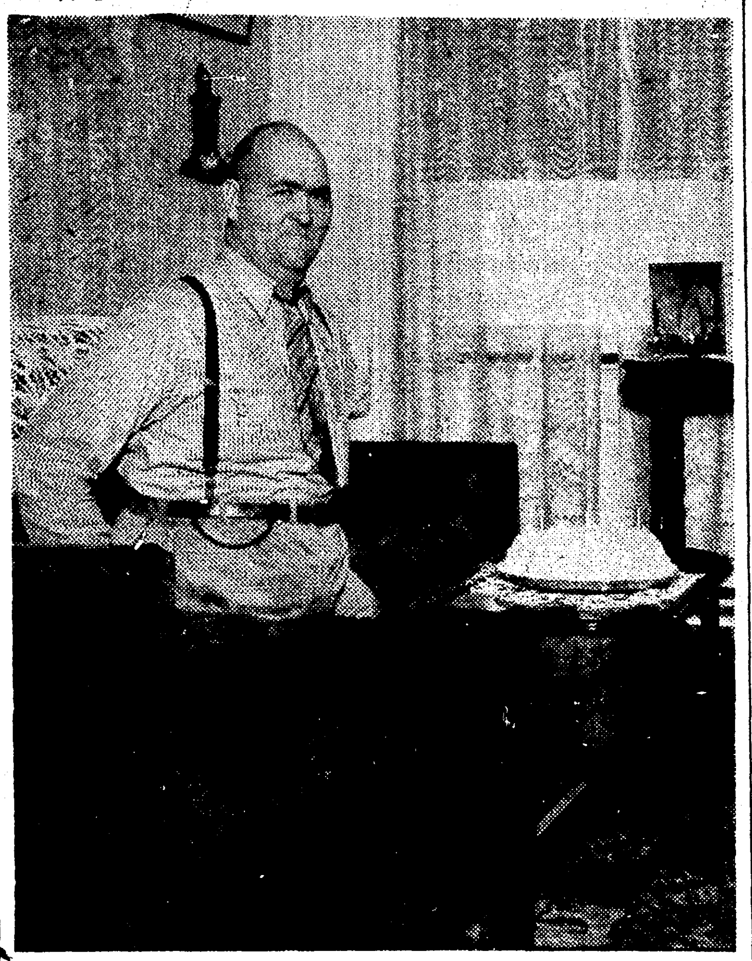
About 280 miles to the north the Chinese and Japanese still are contesting for the strategic junction of the Peiping-Hankow and Lunghai railway at Chengchow, only recently captured by the Japanese in a sudden dash across the Yellow river which changed its course as a result of war-damaged dikes. The Japanese promptly lost Chengchow and last reports from Chungking said the Chinese were at the gates of Chungmow, 35 miles to the east.

In Inner Mongolia the Chinese recently reported the recapture of several outposts in the Paotow area, 340 miles west of Peiping.

It probably is too much to hope that the Chinese will take Canton or succeed in any of their other main geographic objectives now.

But if Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, first victim of aggression, was correct when he claimed that a sort of poetic justice exists in this war because he was the first restored, then China's turn is about due.

WORLD WAR 'VET' CELEBRATES



Lewis E. Grievette, 2711 Gordon avenue, Monroe, celebrated his 54th birthday anniversary at his home the past week. Many friends called to felicitate him on the event. Mr. Grievette has in the past been honored by the L. B. Faulk post, American Legion, and by the Rodney J. Hobbs post, Veterans of Foreign wars, for his bravery in engagements overseas in 1917 when he lost both legs through injuries received in battle. Two of his step-sons are doing their bit in the World War II. Carlos Spillers, 23, and James Spillers, 17, are the two young men. James wrote home the past week that he is well and enjoying life at Pearl Harbor. He enlisted last July and after the usual training period in San Diego, Calif., was sent to Hawaii. His older brother is a graduate of the air corps technical school, Ranhoul, Ill. He ranks as private first class. He was last heard from at the Savannah, Ga. air base.

ENEMY IS QUIET IN PHILIPPINES

East Indies for the second time within 48 hours as though in preparation for the expected attack. The Dutch said the bombs missed their mark.

Reconnaissance flights, which the Dutch have noted as another tip-off on a coming push, continued scouting the outer provinces.

But a new—and to some an unexpected—turn, opened up new strategical possibilities in the war against Japan, developed in China.

Correspondents who visited the city of Changsha confirmed that the Chinese had won a great victory by routing 120,000 Japanese from this capital of Hunan province with only 80,000 men. For the first time a fully equipped Chinese army, thanks in some measure to American aid, took the field and defeated a numerically superior Japanese force. Chinese figures showed they inflicted losses of five to one upon the invaders.

Foreign eye-witnesses saw huge piles of Japanese dead littering the hills and the fresh mounds of graves and ashes of hurried cremations.

As the Chinese pushed other offensives against Canton, Hankow, the Chengchow area and in Inner Mongolia, observers compared the Chinese to the Russians, both turning to push the invader out and allowing him no winter rest.

The Chinese, it was pointed out, could aid in a flanking offensive from Burma through Thailand and Indo-China, while from Chinese soil it would be possible to bomb not only Japan but also Formosa and the Hainan islands, the bases for the attacks on Malaya and the Philippines.

The week saw these developments on the World war fronts:

January 4—Chinese claimed a decisive defeat over the Japanese at Changsha after tens of thousands of Japanese slain in retreat. American defenders of Corregidor in Manila bay downed four out of 21 Japanese raiders. The Soviet army recaptured Borovsk. The R. A. F. blasted Tripoli and Naples.

January 5—Japanese made fresh landings on the west coast of Malaya and claimed the occupation of Brunei in Borneo as well as the island of Labuan. Yves Perigaux, chief of staff for Interior Minister Pierre Pucheu of the Vichy government was found dead on a railway track near Paris. Corregidor beat off its fourth raid. United States army bombers hit a Japanese battleship three times and sank a destroyer off Davao. Soviets advanced in the Kerch peninsula.

January 6—American bombers arrived to aid American forces in the Philippines while anti-aircraft gunners beat off a four-hour Japanese assault on Corregidor with hits on seven out of 50 Japanese planes. Fall of Kuantan airdrome in Malaya gave the Japanese a base 190 miles from Singapore. Chinese said Japanese were driven back 10 miles from Changsha. Soviets broke German siege lines around Sevastopol and claimed the Germans were driven out of a 300-square mile area around Leningrad.

January 7—Japanese flying boats attacked the Dutch East Indies naval base at Amboina. Japanese increased their pressure at the approaches to Batan peninsula in the Philippines. Russians made landings 40 miles north of Sevastopol and pressed toward Kharkov. Finns admitted that the Russians had pierced their lines north of Leningrad.

January 8—British acknowledged fresh withdrawals in Malaya but said lines were holding 60 miles north of Kuala Lumpur, 240 miles north of Singapore. Japanese admitted removal of their forces from Changsha. R. A. F. raided Bangkok in Thailand starting fires. King Carol proposed himself for leadership of the Free Rumanian movement. United States submarine of Asiatic fleet sank an enemy transport and three cargo vessels. Japanese losses in Wake announced as total of seven warships.

January 9—Japan admitted an allied submarine raid only 100 miles from Tokyo. Russians said German sieges of Leningrad and Sevastopol were virtually broken. American and allied airmen continued to pound Japanese in Bangkok with seven or eight more Japanese planes destroyed to one of their own. Russians captured Mosalsk 30 miles short of the Nazi Vyazma-Bryansk defense line. American President liner Ruth Alexander lost in Dutch East Indies water after a Japanese air bombing.

of congress said, was that income tax exemptions be lowered from $1,500 to $1,000 for married couples and from $750 to $500 for single persons. Others involved increases in corporate taxes and excise levies such as those on liquor, tobacco and gasoline.

Asserting that these proposals would not raise sufficient revenue, Senator Taft, Republican, Ohio, said it was becoming evident that to meet the president's budget congress would have to resort to a sales tax or a withholding tax whereby the government would take a percentage of each pay check.

No member of the house ways and means committee was ready to say what the general sales tax rate should be, if one were enacted, and all emphasized that decisions on any levies would be deferred until after extensive hearings on all revenue-raising proposals.

Among comments of committee members were:

Representative Disney, Democrat, Oklahoma—"I've been for it all the time. But it might be difficult to pass such a bill which would exempt nothing."

Representative Gearhart, Republican, California—"I think it should be thoroughly investigated before we turn our back on it. It's a popular form of taxation in our state."

Representative Hill, Democrat, Washington—"I'm opposed to it. I don't think we have yet touched the extreme profits that big industries are making. I look on it as a last resort."

McKeough, Democrat, Illinois—"I'm opposed to it, but we might have to come to it."

Robertson, Democrat, Virginia—"I'm for it. But we've got to be very careful about exemptions."

Ford, Democrat, Mississippi—"I am favorable to it at the present time. It appears that it is the only solution."

tee Rogge could testify that Christenberry, now assistant district attorney, divulged confidential information concerning the investigations, as well as grand jury actions, during the political inquiry.

A speech made on the United States senate floor in 1935 by the late Senator Huey P. Long, in which Long charged opponents had met in Louisiana and discussed a plot to assassinate him, figured in the hearing.

Morrison asserted that Long's speech was made on the basis of information furnished him by Christenberry, a brother of Earle Christenberry, Long's secretary.

Walmsley said there was "no plot of any kind" in connection with the conferences and that such a charge had been completely "denounced." Morrison argued that Christenberry had supplied this information to the late Senator Long and this was evidence of unfitness for district attorney.

He also contended that Christenberry filed as a "dummy candidate" for city judge in New Orleans in the 1932 election and later withdrew. He said the "dummy candidate" practice enabled political groups using it to obtain more than their share of the election commissioners and gave them an advantage in the race.

Senators Overton and Ellender, who recommended Christenberry for appointment, denied he was a "dummy candidate," asserting he had filed in good faith and later withdrew when the formerly Walmsley political organization in New Orleans decided to support Overton for senator in 1932. The Long organization, they said, supported the Walmsley or "Old Regular" organization's candidate for judge.

Walmsley told the subcommittee he had no personal knowledge of Christenberry's fitness for office and that he did not know him very well.

Repeatedly McFarland and the other subcommittee members asked the association spokesmen to "give us facts, not hearsay."

"Unless you present some evidence about this man (Christenberry), I don't intend to ask any one about anything," McFarland declared. Case O'Mahoney accused Morrison of "going afield."

HINESE LAUNCH DRIVES ON JAPS

Yangtze river port—Changsha, Nanchang and from northeast of Ichang. A third has been on the Yellow river front in the Chengchow area. The fourth was in Inner Mongolia in the area of Paotow, the farthest west outpost of the Japanese in that far northern area.

In addition Chiang has sent unspecified numbers of his crack troops into Burma to bolster the British positions on that flank of the Japanese drive toward Singapore.

Commanders of the united nations' forces are bound to watch these moves with the closest attention, for they may provide the means to bomb Tokyo.

China's great manpower, armed by the arsenals of America and perhaps spearheaded by American air force and tank force, may provide the land offensive against Japan. President Roosevelt has emphasized that there was no limitation on where American forces would operate.

From China may come the initiative which may be just sufficient at the present time to tie up and paralyze enough Japanese forces to prevent their winning at Singapore.

Surprising success already has been scored, according to Chinese communiques. Chinese troops, which never have been operating much farther than 30 or 40 miles from Canton, are reported to have fought their way into that city's suburbs in two places.

Likewise on the central front, the Chinese are reported to have made a penetration into Nanchang, 160 miles southeast of Hankow.

About 190 miles south and slightly west of Hankow, the Chinese have scored their third great victory, routing and trapping a force which they estimated at 100,000 and exacting casualties which they place at 30,000 or more.

From the Ichang area, 160 airline miles up the Yangtze river from Hankow, minor success also has been reported. Ichang is 800 miles up the Yangtze from Shanghai and the farthest Japanese penetration into central China.

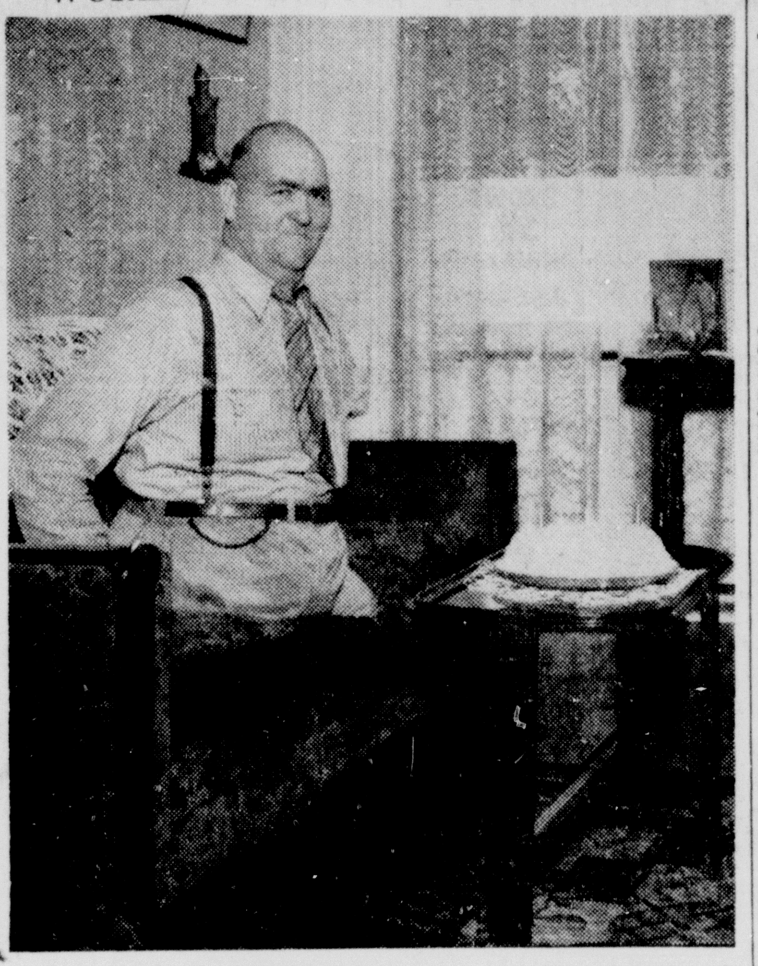
About 280 miles to the north the Chinese and Japanese still are contesting for the strategic junction of the Peiping-Hankow and Lunghai railway at Chengchow, only recently captured by the Japanese in a sudden dash across the Yellow river which changed its course as a result of war-damaged dikes. The Japanese promptly lost Chengchow and last reports from Chungking said the Chinese were at the gates of Chungmow, 35 miles to the east.

In Inner Mongolia the Chinese recently reported the recapture of several outposts in the Paotow area, 340 miles west of Peiping.

It probably is too much to hope that the Chinese will take Canton or succeed in any of their other main geographic objectives now.

But if Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, first victim of aggression, was correct when he claimed that a sort of poetic justice exists in this war because he was the first restored, then China's turn is about due.

WORLD WAR 'VET' CELEBRATES



Lewis E. Grievette, 2711 Gordon avenue, Monroe, celebrated his 54th birthday anniversary at his home the past week. Many friends called to felicitate him on the event. Mr. Grievette has in the past been honored by the L. B. Faulk post, American Legion, and by the Rodney J. Hobbs post, Veterans of Foreign wars, for his bravery in engagements overseas in 1917 when he lost both legs through injuries received in battle. Two of his step-sons are doing their bit in the World War II. Carlos Spillers, 23, and James Spillers, 17, are the two young men. James wrote home the past week that he is well and enjoying life at Pearl Harbor. He enlisted last July and after the usual training period in San Diego, Calif., was sent to Hawaii. His older brother is a graduate of the air corps technical school, Ranhoul, Ill. He ranks as private first class. He was last heard from at the Savannah, Ga. air base.

ENEMY IS QUIET IN PHILIPPINES

East Indies for the second time within 48 hours as though in preparation for the expected attack. The Dutch said the bombs missed their mark.

Reconnaissance flights, which the Dutch have noted as another tip-off on a coming push, continued scouting the outer provinces.

But a new—and to some an unexpected—turn, opened up new strategical possibilities in the war against Japan, developed in China.

Correspondents who visited the city of Changsha confirmed that the Chinese had won a great victory by routing 120,000 Japanese from this capital of Hunan province with only 80,000 men. For the first time a fully equipped Chinese army, thanks in some measure to American aid, took the field and defeated a numerically superior Japanese force. Chinese figures showed they inflicted losses of five to one upon the invaders.

Foreign eye-witnesses saw huge piles of Japanese dead littering the hills and the fresh mounds of graves and ashes of hurried cremations.

As the Chinese pushed other offensives against Canton, Hankow, the Chengchow area and in Inner Mongolia, observers compared the Chinese to the Russians, both turning to push the invader out and allowing him no winter rest.

The Chinese, it was pointed out, could aid in a flanking offensive from Burma through Thailand and Indo-China, while from Chinese soil it would be possible to bomb not only Japan but also Formosa and the Hainan islands, the bases for the attacks on Malaya and the Philippines.

The week saw these developments on the World war fronts:

January 4—Chinese claimed a decisive defeat over the Japanese at Changsha after tens of thousands of Japanese slain in retreat. American defenders of Corregidor in Manila bay downed four out of 21 Japanese raiders. The Soviet army recaptured Borovsk. The R. A. F. blasted Tripoli and Naples.

January 5—Japanese made fresh landings on the west coast of Malaya and claimed the occupation of Brunei in Borneo as well as the island of Labuan. Yves Perigaux, chief of staff for Interior Minister Pierre Pucheu of the Vichy government was found dead on a railway track near Paris. Corregidor beat off its fourth raid. United States army bombers hit a Japanese battleship three times and sank a destroyer off Davao. Soviets advanced in the Kerch peninsula.

January 6—American bombers arrived to aid American forces in the Philippines while anti-aircraft gunners beat off a four-hour Japanese assault on Corregidor with hits on seven out of 50 Japanese planes. Fall of Kuantan airdrome in Malaya gave the Japanese a base 190 miles from Singapore. Chinese said Japanese were driven back 10 miles from Changsha. Soviets broke German siege lines around Sevastopol and claimed the Germans were driven out of a 300-square mile area around Leningrad.

January 7—Japanese flying boats attacked the Dutch East Indies naval base at Amboina. Japanese increased their pressure at the approaches to Batan peninsula in the Philippines. Russians made landings 40 miles north of Sevastopol and pressed toward Kharkov. Finns admitted that the Russians had pierced their lines north of Leningrad.

January 8—British acknowledged fresh withdrawals in Malaya but said lines were holding 60 miles north of Kuala Lumpur, 240 miles north of Singapore. Japanese admitted removal of their forces from Changsha. R. A. F. raided Bangkok in Thailand starting fires. King Carol proposed himself for leadership of the Free Rumanian movement. United States submarine of Asiatic fleet sank an enemy transport and three cargo vessels. Japanese losses in Wake announced as total of seven warships.

January 9—Japan admitted an allied submarine raid only 100 miles from Tokyo. Russians said German sieges of Leningrad and Sevastopol were virtually broken. American and allied airmen continued to pound Japanese in Bangkok with seven or eight more Japanese planes destroyed to one of their own. Russians captured Mosalsk 30 miles short of the Nazi Vyazma-Bryansk defense line. American President liner Ruth Alexander lost in Dutch East Indies water after a Japanese air bombing.

President For 1942 Succeeds Louis F. Mathis, Retiring Head

Members of the board of directors of the Junior Chamber of Commerce elected Paul A. Reising president and Fred Cochran vice-president of the group for 1942 at a meeting held Friday night in the chamber office. Mr. Reising succeeds Louis F. Mathis, retiring president.

Mr. Reising appointed several committees following his election. They are as follows:

A committee to prepare a ballot containing a program for 1942, F. C. McConnell, chairman, George Weaks, Jr., and Wesley Shafto; membership committee, George Guerriero, chairman, Travis Oliver, Jr., T. H. Scott, J. P. McKee and J. S. Cage; budget committee, Mr. Cochran, chairman, Ray Updegraff and Mr. Mathis.

The board voted to hold a complimentary banquet on Wednesday night, January 21, to honor the Ouachita Parish High school football team of 1941, north Louisiana champions, and the coaching staff. The team and coaches will be guests of the members of the junior chamber. D. Ross Banister, in charge of arrangements, will be toastmaster.

The board favored a continuation of the senior chamber's activities in 1941 to bring defense projects to the Monroe and West Monroe area.

FEDERAL SALES TAX IS LIKELY

of congress said, was that income tax exemptions be lowered from $1,500 to $1,000 for married couples and from $750 to $500 for single persons. Others involved increases in corporate taxes and excise levies such as those on liquor, tobacco and gasoline.

Asserting that these proposals would not raise sufficient revenue, Senator Taft, Republican, Ohio, said it was becoming evident that to meet the president's budget congress would have to resort to a sales tax or a withholding tax whereby the government would take a percentage of each pay check.

No member of the house ways and means committee was ready to say what the general sales tax rate should be, if one were enacted, and all emphasized that decisions on any levies would be deferred until after extensive hearings on all revenue-raising proposals.

Among comments of committee members were:

Representative Disney, Democrat, Oklahoma—"I've been for it all the time. But it might be difficult to pass such a bill which would exempt nothing."

Representative Gearhart, Republican, California—"I think it should be thoroughly investigated before we turn our back on it. It's a popular form of taxation in our state."

Representative Hill, Democrat, Washington—"I'm opposed to it. I don't think we have yet touched the extreme profits that big industries are making. I look on it as a last resort."

McKeough, Democrat, Illinois—"I'm opposed to it, but we might have to come to it."

Robertson, Democrat, Virginia—"I'm for it. But we've got to be very careful about exemptions."

Ford, Democrat, Mississippi—"I am favorable to it at the present time. It appears that it is the only solution."

ELMER RICE DIVORCED

RENO, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Elmer Rice, New York playwright and novelist, won a divorce today from the former Hazel Levy on grounds of extreme cruelty. They were married in New York in 1915. Rice, who has written many books and plays, is best known for his play, "Street Scene," awarded the Pulitzer prize in 1929.

tee Rogge could testify that Christenberry, now assistant district attorney, divulged confidential information concerning the investigations, as well as grand jury actions, during the political inquiry.

A speech made on the United States senate floor in 1935 by the late Senator Huey P. Long, in which Long charged opponents had met in Louisiana and discussed a plot to assassinate him, figured in the hearing.

Morrison asserted that Long's speech was made on the basis of information furnished him by Christenberry, a brother of Earle Christenberry, Long's secretary.

Walmsley said there was "no plot of any kind" in connection with the conferences and that such a charge had been completely "denounced." Morrison argued that Christenberry had supplied this information to the late Senator Long and this was evidence of unfitness for district attorney.

He also contended that Christenberry filed as a "dummy candidate" for city judge in New Orleans in the 1932 election and later withdrew. He said the "dummy candidate" practice enabled political groups using it to obtain more than their share of the election commissioners and gave them an advantage in the race.

Senators Overton and Ellender, who recommended Christenberry for appointment, denied he was a "dummy candidate," asserting he had filed in good faith and later withdrew when the formerly Walmsley political organization in New Orleans decided to support Overton for senator in 1932. The Long organization, they said, supported the Walmsley or "Old Regular" organization's candidate for judge.

Walmsley told the subcommittee he had no personal knowledge of Christenberry's fitness for office and that he did not know him very well.

Repeatedly McFarland and the other subcommittee members asked the association spokesmen to "give us facts, not hearsay."

"Unless you present some evidence about this man (Christenberry), I don't intend to ask any one about anything," McFarland declared. O'Mahoney accused Morrison of "going afield."

At another point Ballard said he wanted to show the committee that Rogge had "no confidence in Christenberry," but Austin said he did not know that such evidence would be material.

It Will Take Fighting To Win

So much has been written recently about the immense productive facilities of the United States that some people may be getting a warped idea of what it takes to win a war.

It takes production, all right. It is good that we can produce umpty-steen tons of steel and that we can build this and that many ships, planes, and guns. That must be done, right up to the hilt, on a scale the axis powers cannot match.

The grisly mistake, however, would be to fall into the habit of feeling that somehow this wins the war automatically, that in some mysterious manner the axis peoples are going to gaze across the sea at this impressive pile of war material and then just lie down and roll over.

That is not the way wars are won. Wars are won by fighting. Wars are won by killing enemy soldiers and sailors.

In every one of those tanks there must be between two and eight fighting men. On every one of those ships there must be between 50 and 2,500 fighting men. Behind every rifle and machine gun there must be a fighting man.

And when all that armament is ready, and all those men are trained, then they must fight, and many of them must die.

We do not for a moment minimize the importance, the vital importance, of building every weapon our economy can be made to produce at whatever necessary temporary cost to the civilian standard of living. We do not minimize the advantage to the United States and its allies of their tremendous material resources, though if the Japanese seize the Philippines and the East Indies, even that advantage will be to some extent offset. These are tremendous advantages, of which we must make the most, seven days a week and 24 hours a day.

But victory is not assured by them. We could lose the war if the aggressive spirit is lost. The war, in the long run, will be won by killing Germans and Italians and Japanese. That sounds harsh, but it is true. It is war.

In all our talk about production and resources, let us not forget for one minute that this is war, and war is killing, and war is won by beating the enemy's troops in the field. Let us not beguile ourselves with subconscious lullabies sung by contemplation of our great resources. Two million American men in the armed forces are not thus lulled. Other millions face the reality on February 16.

Our task is not only to produce weapons. It is to use them. It is to seek out the enemy and destroy him. In that task many an American faces wounds and death.

There is potential victory on the drawing-boards, in shop, mill and mine. But it cannot become actual victory until it is translated into terms of dead enemies lying before the flaming muzzles of American guns.

THE YOUNG MEN ARE ALL RIGHT

Some time ago we remember writing a piece by that title, at a time when army morale was being heavily criticized and it was feared that the young men of the juke-box generation had become soft, mentally, morally and physically.

We're glad we wrote it, for it has been written much better since—written in blood on the sands of Hawaii and Luzon.

The only trouble there's ever been with the young men now in the army camps is the same trouble that lay in the minds of the whole nation—we couldn't quite take this thing seriously; we couldn't quite believe it could really happen.

The navy, caught off base as much by the national habit of complacence as by any specific neglect, showed at Pearl Harbor that its men of today are fit to have sailed with Jones or Lawrence. The air pilots have already shown that they can fly with or against the world's best. The marines at Wake are fit comrades for their predecessors at Derna or Chateau Thierry, and the army is proving daily its kinship with the men of Lexington, Gettysburg, and the Argonne.

DON'T WORRY ABOUT ARMY MAIL

Many parents and relatives of soldiers and sailors worry unnecessarily about delays in delivery of their letters to the men in the armed forces, or about delays in getting replies.

There are many factors which often hold up this correspondence. Many soldiers are on special duty watching bridges, factories or other vital defense spots. That means that letters addressed to them at camp have to be rehandled and forwarded. In such a situation, the soldier or sailor may find himself without writing paper or stamps for a reply. So it isn't a bad plan to enclose postage and writing material for an answer when you write to that boy in the service.

Be patient about unavoidable delays, and don't let them prey on you or cause unnecessary worry.

JIMMIE FIDLER In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10.—Within recent weeks, I have added my slap to the many press spankings administered to Deanna Durbin for quarreling with Universal, the studio which made her (and which, admittedly, is largely indebted to the young star for its own salvation).

The basis of my past criticism has been my belief that now is no time for any actress to be fighting her employer, because (1) entertainment—especially the sort Miss Durbin provides—is needed by the nation, and (2) walking out on a studio borders a little too closely on the "strike" custom, which is none too popular today.

I do not withdraw censure of the young actress for her walk-out, but I do feel that someone should take her part in answer to recently published rumors that she intends to go to England to sing for the British soldiers.

To begin with, Miss Durbin has never admitted any such plan. As yet, the story has been no more than unfounded rumor.

Secondly (and as I briefly remarked here the other day), Deanna was born in Winnepeg, Canada, which is a part of the British Empire. Perhaps she feels duty bound to do something for the nation of her birth. You can't criticize a girl for that, can you?

All this damfoolishness, which is doing Deanna no good, would end promptly if she and Universal thumped the chips off their own shoulders and replaced ugly scowls with pretty grins. I'm not saying which side is right in their quarrel, but only in the case of absolute fanatics—like Hitler—is peace, through commonsensical, friendly talks, impossible.

Fidling:
If that box office star Jaynet Gaynor
(Remember that grand entertainer?)
Hadn't been thrust aside
While still in her stride,
I'd consider this business much saner.

What's News: Lopsided: That Linda Darnell-Dick (Mickey Rooney's pal) Paxton so-called "romance" isn't so called by her. . . . Foresight: Is it known that Uncle Sam underwrote financing of Walt Disney's new studio, which is why it was built for quick conversion into a hospital, a step already under way? . . . Patriotic: Howard Hughes' big plans for more screen epics are about to be pigeon-holed while he devotes full time to airplane building for Uncle Sam. . . . Streamlined: Bing Crosby's modern version of "Clementine" is so popular, his arrangement will be published in music form with Bing's face on the cover. . . . Lucky Girl: Columbia is readying a star buildup for Janet Blair, tabbed by her bosses as sure fire. . . . Boom Time: "Remember the Day" has brought Claudette Colbert more mail than any previous film since "It Happened One Night." . . . Dead Give-Away: Dance Maestro Arthur Murray says it's easy to tell when Groucho Marx has a good gin-rummy hand—Groucho's face lights up and he plays it wrong!"

Jane Withers told me an amusing war-time incident today. Seems the Withers gardener, Chris van Poppen, is Holland-born, but a naturalized citizen. Soon after the outbreak of war, he needed some identification papers from his safe deposit box. But bank officials, after listening to his gutteral accent, cited the Enemy Alies Act and refused him admittance. "But I'm a citizen!" van Poppen expostulated. "So?" countered the bankers. "Then show us your citizenship papers." That was the impasse: The papers were in the safe deposit box. Not until Miss Withers was summoned to identify her gardener was the blockade lifted.

Personal Observations: Shirley Temple is growing into as genteel a young lady as she was a polite little girl. George Raft likes corner tables in night clubs. When angry at gin-rummy, Johnny Weissmuller carefully tears one card—which of course spoils that deck. I never knew a beautiful redhead to spend less time before mirrors than Jeanette MacDonald. You'd hardly think it from his screen roles, but Bruce Cabot is one of the film colony's best dressed men. Add nail biters: Linda Darnell. First thing William Powell says to a new interviewer: "Ask your questions—but nothing about love lives." If you plan to walk beside Joel McCrea, better time yourself two average steps to his one long stride. Six foot, four inch Arthur Treacher instinctively ducks when he walks through a doorway.

I dropped in on Columbia's "Trinidad" set, primarily because Gregory Ratoff is the director, and where there's Ratoff there's a story. He didn't fail me. Ratoff was directing a difficult death scene, but was dissatisfied with the histrionics of the actor. After several re-takes, Greg exploded. "Leesten!" he cried in Russo-English dialect. "You die steenking; Pleeze put moe life in your dying!"

OUR CHILDREN

By Angelo Patri

Dear boys and girls: Your first duty these days is to keep well. You know the rules. Keep them strictly so that you will keep fit and so save worry and waste, and the nurse's time and the physician's energy, and your parents' anxiety.

Eat your breakfast. If you don't feel up to it go out and trot around the block, fill yourself with fresh air, and cheerfulness, and then eat your cereal, milk, prunes or whatnot. It is smart to be hearty.

Wash your hands and rinse your mouth before starting for school and put a couple of paper handkerchiefs in your pocket. Avoid anybody who is coughing and sneezing, just in case. If it is you who is indulging in these trying exercises, cover your face with your handkerchief and keep away from others. If you have a cold, stay home, go to bed, drink plenty of water and citrus fruit juice. That way you will save the others and get well yourself.

But you won't catch a cold if you are really fit. By taking care about eating the things that are good for you—your mother knows about them—by playing hard in the open air, by laughing as much as you can, sleeping with the fresh air coming into your room, doing your work up to standard, you will be too healthy to get a cold.

Colds come upon half-sick people. Stay fit and they can't cach you.

Doing your duty well is a great help toward health. If you do your work so well that it pleases everybody around you, your conscience just laughs out loud; and when that happens your health rises to the 100 per cent mark. It is hard for you to be sick if your conscience is clear and happy. And if you should meet with an accident, and be ill, it won't last long if your conscience is easy.

Your conscience is troubled when you fail to do what is expected of you—when you eat the wrong things, play when you ought to be working, tell a wrong story, disobey your mother, neglect your homework, forget your prayers. If you make any of these mistakes your conscience begins to fuss around and that upsets your stomach and muddles your head and the first thing you know, you're feeling miserable.

These days you are a sodier in the United States army. Your duty is to keep well, cheer up your father and mother by doing a good job, help your country by doing the chore appointed you whether it is blowing a bugle, rolling bandages, running errands, ringing doorbells. Do it to the best of your ability and you will be helping your country.

Don't forget about keeping fit. You can't do that by wishing. You eat your fruit and vegetables, drink your milk, work, play and sleep according to the rules. That's your duty as a civilian soldier. As such we salute you.

Text: Luke 3:1-6, 15-17, 21-22

By William E. Gilroy, D. D.
Editor of Advance

Luke, with the exactness of the historian, has made a great contribution to our knowledge of New Testament events in their careful dating in relation to secular history. We do not know the precise date of the birth of Jesus, nor do we know His exact age when He began His ministry, or just how long that ministry lasted.

These are matters concerning which there has been much controversy among scholars, but Luke has put the Gospel story in dates that are sufficiently accurate and trustworthy. Fuller knowledge of the very day and hour of any event would add nothing whatever to the spiritual significance of the Gospel facts.

It was, Luke says, "in the 15th year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea," when John the Baptist came from the wilderness as the forerunner of Jesus, preaching the baptism of repentance and the remission of sins. According to Luke, John had the consciousness of a clear call from God. In this clear consciousness there was the realization that he was not the Messiah, but that his work was that of preparation for the Messiah who was about to come. John was of course thoroughly versed in the Hebrew Scriptures, and he found a description of his own mission in the book of the prophet Isaiah. He was the voice of one crying in the wilderness, "Make ready the way of the Lord; make his paths straight."

Immediately there were those who believed that in John the expected Messiah had come, but he was insistent in correcting that impression. His baptism was a baptism of water, signifying cleansing and repentance, but John said that there was one coming, mightier than himself, the latchet of whose shoes he was not worthy to unloose, who would baptize them with the Holy Spirit and with fire.

It is strange that almost invariably we picture John the Baptist as an old man, somewhat of the hermit type, living apart from men and renouncing the ways of the world. On the contrary, John was a very young man, a flaming youth, on fire with passionate convictions, subjecting himself to rigid disciplines such as a soldier of today might accept and undergo.

John's mission was decidedly in the world, leaving the wilderness that he might come in contact with men and society, persuading individuals to turn from their sins and evil ways, and urging society to purge itself so it might be worthy to receive the Messiah who was about to come.

To John, Jesus Himself came to be baptized. John hesitated and would have refused, feeling his own unworthiness and how unfitting it was that he who needed so much to be baptized himself should baptize the Messiah whose coming he had prophesied. "Suffer it to be so now," He said, as Matthew tells us in his account of the baptism, "for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." (Matthew 3:15.)

Why did Jesus thus insist upon this public baptism? John had definitely preached baptism as an outward sign of repentance and the beginning of the new life, but Jesus had no sin of which to repent and in Him was the fullness of the new life He had come to impart to men. The baptism, however, was in full harmony with the nature, meaning and purpose of the coming of Jesus. It marked His full humanity, and His coming to share the life of sinful men that He might be the righteousness of God for them. This is the very essence of the Gospel message, and the public baptism of Jesus.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

AN 8-DAY WONDER—St. Maur Desmousseaux, a French judge, celebrated his son's departure to Oran, Africa, by an intimate dinner which lasted eight days, from December 12 to December 19, 1865. Father and son were celebrating the young man's appointment to the civil service. When they finally arose from the table after 190 hours of continuous feasting, the ship on which the young man was to sail had been gone a week. It was the ill-fated Borysthene, victim of one of the worst shipwrecks in the French annals.

IN WASHINGTON

By Peter Edson
(Monroe Morning World Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON—To a journalistic bum—a mere shoddy thread among the gold braid and a raveling on the fringes of mighty officialdom—the saddest New York news in Washington was not the fall of Manila, but the fall of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean's million-dollar estate, Friendship.

To yokels and provincials who don't grasp the meaning and significance of Friendship with a capital F, it should be explained that this modest, 75-acre little place in the heart of the crowded District of Columbia's best residential district has been the playground of capital society lo, these many years.

Here foregathered on exclusive invitation only the socially conscious—and in this case that good New Deal phrase has a double meaning, for it includes not only the social reformers, the people who want to do something about the underprivileged poor, but also the social climbers, the people who want to do something about the underprivileged rich.

Mrs. McLean, best known to the world as the owner of the supposedly unlucky Hope diamond, has throughout the years been broad-minded about her guest list. Mrs. McLean even entertained the Harding gang. First requisite has been to get elected to high office or appointed to fairly high office. The brand of politics made no difference.

During the defense period Mrs. McLean has been most famous for her Sunday night suppers—intimate little affairs of 90 or a couple of hundred guests. Good food and drink, an oasis in Washington's otherwise dry Sabbaths. To Friendship have flocked the chosen senators and congressmen and undersecretaries and administrators and coordinators—the people of influence—the Honorable Joe Governments themselves and their wives, checking their hats and coats at the entrance, being assigned to chatty little tables of four or so for supper, and here the company was mixed up as only a skillful hostess can do. Sourpuss old Senator Isolation might have as his dinner partner the wife of dynamic young Congressman Intervention, and the other couple at the table might be Mr. Big Corporation, a dollar-a-year boy whose company was being persecuted by injunctions and war orders, struggling to make talky-talk with the wife of Mr. Chief Assistant Trust Buster.

But talking politics and lobbying and buttonholing have been barred at Friendship. That has been house rule No. 1. All has been badinage, haute monde and uppity-do.

What do the great and the near-great in Washington talk about when they don't talk politics and issues? Mrs. McLean figured it out long ago. She didn't let 'em talk. She showed 'em movies, first run and hot from Hollywood.

After every one of these Sunday soirees, the Washington newspaper society gals could be counted on to break forth in a gush. . . . "The cream of Washington official society was gathered last night. . . . Here were all the characters for a great play. . . . Ambassadors, statesmen, admirals, generals, and the leaders in the world of business assembled. . . . The hundred most charming and brilliant women of the United States . . . ." And so on for columns. The conversational gems, the state secrets and the words of the great which might be picked up and jotted down on the cuff at one of these affairs would undoubtedly include such nifties as, "Wasn't the supper delicious, dear!" or "Swell picture, Charlie, wasn't it!" Exclamation marks after both of those, you'll note. Statesmen never ask questions, they give out.

All this bonne vivante and high jinks is to end. Friendship, going the way of all things, has been taken over by the gov'nment and will be a site for a housing project for Uncle Sam's nieces—the typewriter and adding machine punchers who will win the war with carbon copies and comptometer.

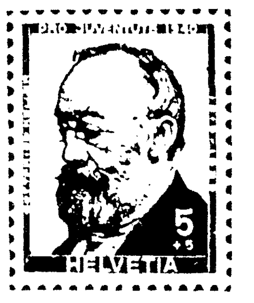
Now this is a worthy cause, but the question arises as to what on earth is the upper crust of official Washington society going to do on Sunday nights, after Friendship has been turned over to the woikin' goils? This is a problem of first magnitude.

A man on the inside of this charmed and charming Friendship set could probably not speak thus frankly on the subject, but if they'll take a tip from a punk standing on the outside of Friendship's high and massive spiked iron fence, there is a way out. The government social planners should make a recreational social project director out of Mrs. McLean, WPA should build her a new Friendship, the USO should provide entertainment, the stamp plan should provide food and the school lunch program should set aside a fund for champagne.

How else can the morale of our Washington leaders be maintained for the hard, long fight ahead?

STAMP NEWS

By I. S. Klein



Swiss Series Honors Heroes of Literature

SWITZERLAND'S "Pro Juventute" stamps, semi-postals first issued in 1913, pay homage each year to persons outstanding in the nation's literature or history.

The stamp above, issued in 1940, honors Gottfried Keller (1819-1890), a celebrated Swiss novelist and poet and who has been called one of the best modern short story writers.

Keller was born in Zurich of parents who, like the parents of so many famous men, were poor. He read widely while a youth and chose painting for his profession.

Illness, poverty and little success in his chosen field forced his return from Munich to Zurich. During the next four years he studied, wrote lyrics, and turned to literature.

From 1850 to 1855 Keller spent lean years in Berlin, but oddly enough, they marked a turning point in his career. He wrote a four-volume biographical novel, and the first volume of his collection of short stories.

His second successful period extended from 1876, when he retired from his office as secretary of the canton in Zurich, to his death in 1890.

Last fall I heard about a hard young man by the name of Fred Mosell, who was trying to mak living by hammering out original signs of jewelry in the kitchen east side flat.

"I ought to hunt him up," I th "Probably a good paragraph is h in his life."

Later, I was talking with Jepson, the singer. She showed some stunning pieces that this s refugee from Europe had knocked gether for her.

I found the young man the ot day, but not in the kitchen of a ten ment. He has his own busine Thirty-five persons are working f him turning out, in limited quantiti the expensive costume jewelry he d signs.

He was off for Hollywood next da to take orders from a small cliente of stars.

To give you an idea of the ki of thing he spends his time on a the kind of reward he gets for h doing, let me tell you of one piece h made for Jepson.

It is gold, together with other me als. It represents a gaudy mechanic organ on wheels, with a street singe pushing it. Inside is a real Swi music box. You wear it on your coa cranking it up when you want entertain your friends or amaze th cats. It plays one of Miss Jepson favorite opera arias.

The designer found that this ma a hit with the customer, so he bough all the miniature Swiss music boxe he could find, and is working the into costume jewelry.

Another trifle he made for the sam singer represents a box at the Metropolitan, star-spangled in many color in front. A lady and escort are entering the box. They seem to be o enameled metal, with bright colors o the lady's gown.

This trifle looks as though it migh bring a neat sum. I was told that th music box piece, done in ordinary metals, retails for $100.

Mosell is somewhere in the later thirties, small, with dark complexion and quiet, reflective eyes. He was born in Spain, and has lived all over Europe. He learned something about designing jewelry in Paris, but mostly he taught himself.

Most of his pieces are big, so heavy that I couldn't see how a lady could wear them without tearing her clothes. But he knows; else these big-time ladies wouldn't be paying fancy prices for his stuff.

There are many blackout pieces that glow in the dark. Some of these cleverly represent street lamps, while others are animals with glowing eyes. I don't imagine anybody would think of risking any such pieces in a real blackout, but the idea is there.

LIEUT. SMITH NOW SAFE IN HONOLULU

Announcement of the arrival in Honolulu of Lieutenant Karl N. Smith has been received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Karl L. Smith, 3401 Harrison street.

Lieutenant Smith made the trip from San Diego where he had been stationed as a member of an engineer's battalion at Camp Elliott since October 2.

Smith received his commission as a second lieutenant in the marine corps at Quantico, Va., last spring, then he returned for three months special training in a reserve officer class offered in connection with the marine corps schools. Of the class that graduated September 10, he was the only Louisianian to become a regular commissioned officer.

Lieutenant Smith is a graduate of the Northeast Junior College and Louisiana State University where he majored in journalism. He was a member of the business staff of the Shreveport Journal at the time he resigned to enter the marines.

It Will Take Fighting To Win

So much has been written recently about the immense productive facilities of the United States that some people may be getting a warped idea of what it takes to win a war.

It takes production, all right. It is good that we can produce umpty-steen tons of steel and that we can build this and that many ships, planes, and guns. That must be done, right up to the hilt, on a scale the axis powers cannot match.

The grisly mistake, however, would be to fall into the habit of feeling that somehow this wins the war automatically, that in some mysterious manner the axis peoples are going to gaze across the sea at this impressive pile of war material and then just lie down and roll over.

That is not the way wars are won. Wars are won by fighting. Wars are won by killing enemy soldiers and sailors.

In every one of those tanks there must be between two and eight fighting men. On every one of those ships there must be between 50 and 2,500 fighting men. Behind every rifle and machine gun there must be a fighting man.

And when all that armament is ready, and all those men are trained, then they must fight, and many of them must die.

We do not for a moment minimize the importance, the vital importance, of building every weapon our economy can be made to produce at whatever necessary temporary cost to the civilian standard of living. We do not minimize the advantage to the United States and its allies of their tremendous material resources, though if the Japanese seize the Philippines and the East Indies, even that advantage will be to some extent offset. These are tremendous advantages, of which we must make the most, seven days a week and 24 hours a day.

But victory is not assured by them. We could lose the war if the aggressive spirit is lost. The war, in the long run, will be won by killing Germans and Italians and Japanese. That sounds harsh, but it is true. It is war.

In all our talk about production and resources, let us not forget for one minute that this is war, and war is killing, and war is won by beating the enemy's troops in the field. Let us not beguile ourselves with subconscious lullabies sung by contemplation of our great resources. Two million American men in the armed forces are not thus lulled. Other millions face the reality on February 16.

Our task is not only to produce weapons. It is to use them. It is to seek out the enemy and destroy him. In that task many an American faces wounds and death.

There is potential victory on the drawing-boards, in shop, mill and mine. But it cannot become actual victory until it is translated into terms of dead enemies lying before the flaming muzzles of American guns.

THE YOUNG MEN ARE ALL RIGHT

Some time ago we remember writing a piece by that title, at a time when army morale was being heavily criticized and it was feared that the young men of the juke-box generation had become soft, mentally, morally and physically.

We're glad we wrote it, for it has been written much better since—written in blood on the sands of Hawaii and Luzon.

The only trouble there's ever been with the young men now in the army camps is the same trouble that lay in the minds of the whole nation—we couldn't quite take this thing seriously; we couldn't quite believe it could really happen.

The navy, caught off base as much by the national habit of complacence as by any specific neglect, showed at Pearl Harbor that its men of today are fit to have sailed with Jones or Lawrence. The air pilots have already shown that they can fly with or against the world's best. The marines at Wake are fit comrades for their predecessors at Derna or Chateau Thierry, and the army is proving daily its kinship with the men of Lexington, Gettysburg, and the Argonne.

DON'T WORRY ABOUT ARMY MAIL

Many parents and relatives of soldiers and sailors worry unnecessarily about delays in delivery of their letters to the men in the armed forces, or about delays in getting replies.

There are many factors which often hold up this correspondence. Many soldiers are on special duty watching bridges, factories or other vital defense spots. That means that letters addressed to them at camp have to be rehandled and forwarded. In such a situation, the soldier or sailor may find himself without writing paper or stamps for a reply. So it isn't a bad plan to enclose postage and writing material for an answer when you write to that boy in the service.

Be patient about unavoidable delays, and don't let them prey on you or cause unnecessary worry.

JIMMIE FIDLER In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10.—Within recent weeks, I have added my slap to the many press spankings administered to Deanna Durbin for quarreling with Universal, the studio which made her (and which, admittedly, is largely indebted to the young star for its own salvation).

The basis of my past criticism has been my belief that now is no time for any actress to be fighting her employer, because (1) entertainment—especially the sort Miss Durbin provides—is needed by the nation, and (2) walking out on a studio borders a little too closely on the "strike" custom, which is none too popular today.

I do not withdraw censure of the young actress for her walk-out, but I do feel that someone should take her part in answer to recently published rumors that she intends to go to England to sing for the British soldiers.

To begin with, Miss Durbin has never admitted any such plan. As yet, the story has been no more than unfounded rumor.

Secondly (and as I briefly remarked here the other day), Deanna was born in Winnepeg, Canada, which is a part of the British Empire. Perhaps she feels duty bound to do something for the nation of her birth. You can't criticize a girl for that, can you?

All this damfoolishness, which is doing Deanna no good, would end promptly if she and Universal thumped the chips off their own shoulders and replaced ugly scowls with pretty grins. I'm not saying which side is right in their quarrel, but only in the case of absolute fanatics—like Hitler—is peace, through commonsensical, friendly talks, impossible.

If that box office star Jaynet Gaynor

Hadn't been thrust aside
While still in her stride,
I'd consider this business much saner.

What's News: Lopsided: That Linda Darnell-Dick (Mickey Rooney's pal) Paxton so-called "romance" isn't so called by her. . . . Foresight: Is it known that Uncle Sam underwrote financing of Walt Disney's new studio, which is why it was built for quick conversion into a hospital, a step already under way? . . . Patriotic: Howard Hughes' big plans for more screen epics are about to be pigeon-holed while he devotes full time to airplane building for Uncle Sam. . . . Streamlined: Bing Crosby's modern version of "Clementine" is so popular, his arrangement will be published in music form with Bing's face on the cover. . . . Lucky Girl: Columbia is readying a star buildup for Janet Blair, tabbed by her bosses as sure fire. . . . Boom Time: "Remember the Day" has brought Claudette Colbert more mail than any previous film since "It Happened One Night." . . . Dead Give-Away: Dance Maestro Arthur Murray says it's easy to tell when Groucho Marx has a good gin-rummy hand—Groucho's face lights up and he plays it wrong!"

Jane Withers told me an amusing war-time incident today. Seems the Withers gardener, Chris van Poppen, is Holland-born, but a naturalized citizen. Soon after the outbreak of war, he needed some identification papers from his safe deposit box. But bank officials, after listening to his gutteral accent, cited the Enemy Alies Act and refused him admittance. "But I'm a citizen!" van Poppen expostulated. "So?" countered the bankers. "Then show us your citizenship papers." That was the impasse: The papers were in the safe deposit box. Not until Miss Withers was summoned to identify her gardener was the blockade lifted.

Personal Observations: Shirley Temple is growing into as genteel a young lady as she was a polite little girl. George Raft likes corner tables in night clubs. When angry at gin-rummy, Johnny Weissmuller carefully tears one card—which of course spoils that deck. I never knew a beautiful redhead to spend less time before mirrors than Jeanette MacDonald. You'd hardly think it from his screen roles, but Bruce Cabot is one of the film colony's best dressed men. Add nail biters: Linda Darnell. First thing William Powell says to a new interviewer: "Ask your questions—but nothing about love lives." If you plan to walk beside Joel McCrea, better time yourself two average steps to his one long stride. Six foot, four inch Arthur Treacher instinctively ducks when he walks through a doorway.

I dropped in on Columbia's "Trinidad" set, primarily because Gregory Ratoff is the director, and where there's Ratoff there's a story. He didn't fail me. Ratoff was directing a difficult death scene, but was dissatisfied with the histrionics of the actor. After several re-takes, Greg exploded. -"Leesten!" he cried in Russo-English dialect. "You die steenking; Pleeze put moe life in your dying!"

OUR CHILDREN

By Angelo Patri

Dear boys and girls: Your first duty these days is to keep well. You know the rules. Keep them strictly so that you will keep fit and so save worry and waste, and the nurse's time and the physician's energy, and your parents' anxiety.

Eat your breakfast. If you don't feel up to it go out and trot around the block, fill yourself with fresh air, and cheerfulness, and then eat your cereal, milk, prunes or whatnot. It is smart to be hearty.

Wash your hands and rinse your mouth before starting for school and put a couple of paper handkerchiefs in your pocket. Avoid anybody who is coughing and sneezing, just in case. If it is you who is indulging in these trying exercises, cover your face with your handkerchief and keep away from others. If you have a cold, stay home, go to bed, drink plenty of water and citrus fruit juice. That way you will save the others and get well yourself.

But you won't catch a cold if you are really fit. By taking care about eating the things that are good for you—your mother knows about them—by playing hard in the open air, by laughing as much as you can, sleeping with the fresh air coming into your room, doing your work up to standard, you will be too healthy to get a cold.

Colds come upon half-sick people. Stay fit and they can't cach you.

Doing your duty well is a great help toward health. If you do your work so well that it pleases everybody around you, your conscience just laughs out loud; and when that happens your health rises to the 100 per cent mark. It is hard for you to be sick if your conscience is clear and happy. And if you should meet with an accident, and be ill, it won't last long if your conscience is easy.

Your conscience is troubled when you fail to do what is expected of you—when you eat the wrong things, play when you ought to be working, tell a wrong story, disobey your mother, neglect your homework, forget your prayers. If you make any of these mistakes your conscience begins to fuss around and that upsets your stomach and muddles your head and the first thing you know, you're feeling miserable.

These days you are a sodier in the United States army. Your duty is to keep well, cheer up your father and mother by doing a good job, help your country by doing the chore appointed you whether it is blowing a bugle, rolling bandages, running errands, ringing doorbells. Do it to the best of your ability and you will be helping your country.

Don't forget about keeping fit. You can't do that by wishing. You eat your fruit and vegetables, drink your milk, work, play and sleep according to the rules. That's your duty as a civilian soldier. As such we salute you.

The Sunday School Lesson For Jan. 18
Text: Luke 3:1-6, 15-17, 21-22

By William E. Gilroy, D. D.
Editor of Advance

Luke, with the exactness of the historian, has made a great contribution to our knowledge of New Testament events in their careful dating in relation to secular history. We do not know the precise date of the birth of Jesus, nor do we know His exact age when He began His ministry, or just how long that ministry lasted.

These are matters concerning which there has been much controversy among scholars, but Luke has put the Gospel story in dates that are sufficiently accurate and trustworthy. Fuller knowledge of the very day and hour of any event would add nothing whatever to the spiritual significance of the Gospel facts.

It was, Luke says, "in the 15th year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea," when John the Baptist came from the wilderness as the forerunner of Jesus, preaching the baptism of repentance and the remission of sins. According to Luke, John had the consciousness of a clear call from God. In this clear consciousness there was the realization that he was not the Messiah, but that his work was that of preparation for the Messiah who was about to come. John was of course thoroughly versed in the Hebrew Scriptures, and he found a description of his own mission in the book of the prophet Isaiah. He was the voice of one crying in the wilderness, "Make ready the way of the Lord; make his paths straight."

Immediately there were those who believed that in John the expected Messiah had come, but he was insistent in correcting that impression. His baptism was a baptism of water, signifying cleansing and repentance, but John said that there was one coming, mightier than himself, the latchet of whose shoes he was not worthy to unloose, who would baptize them with the Holy Spirit and with fire.

It is strange that almost invariably we picture John the Baptist as an old man, somewhat of the hermit type, living apart from men and renouncing the ways of the world. On the contrary, John was a very young man, a flaming youth, on fire with passionate convictions, subjecting himself to rigid disciplines such as a soldier of today might accept and undergo.

John's mission was decidedly in the world, leaving the wilderness that he might come in contact with men and society, persuading individuals to turn from their sins and evil ways, and urging society to purge itself so it might be worthy to receive the Messiah who was about to come.

To John, Jesus Himself came to be baptized. John hesitated and would have refused, feeling his own unworthiness and how unfitting it was that he who needed so much to be baptized himself should baptize the Messiah whose coming he had prophesied. "Suffer it to be so now," He said, as Matthew tells us in his account of the baptism, "for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." (Matthew 3:15.)

Why did Jesus thus insist upon this public baptism? John had definitely preached baptism as an outward sign of repentance and the beginning of the new life, but Jesus had no sin of which to repent and in Him was the fullness of the new life He had come to impart to men. The baptism, however, was in full harmony with the nature, meaning and purpose of the coming of Jesus. It marked His full humanity, and His coming to share the life of sinful men that He might be the righteousness of God for them. This is the very essence of the Gospel message, and the public baptism of Jesus.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

AN 8-DAY WONDER—St. Maur Desmousseaux, a French judge, celebrated his son's departure to Oran, Africa, by an intimate dinner which lasted eight days, from December 12 to December 19, 1865. Father and son were celebrating the young man's appointment to the civil service. When they finally arose from the table after 190 hours of continuous feasting, the ship on which the young man was to sail had been gone a week. It was the ill-fated Borysthene, victim of one of the worst shipwrecks in the French annals.

IN WASHINGTON

By Peter Edson
(Monroe Morning World Washington Correspondent)

WASHINGTON—To a journalistic bum—a mere shoddy thread among the gold braid and a raveling on the fringes of mighty officialdom—the saddest New York news in Washington was not the fall of Manila, but the fall of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean's million-dollar estate, Friendship.

To yokels and provincials who don't grasp the meaning and significance of Friendship with a capital F, it should be explained that this modest, 75-acre little place in the heart of the crowded District of Columbia's best residential district has been the playground of capital society lo, these many years.

Here foregathered on exclusive invitation only the socially conscious—and in this case that good New Deal phrase has a double meaning, for it includes not only the social reformers, the people who want to do something about the underprivileged poor, but also the social climbers, the people who want to do something about the underprivileged rich.

Mrs. McLean, best known to the world as the owner of the supposedly unlucky Hope diamond, has throughout the years been broad-minded about her guest list. Mrs. McLean even entertained the Harding gang. First requisite has been to get elected to high office or appointed to fairly high office. The brand of politics made no difference.

During the defense period Mrs. McLean has been most famous for her Sunday night suppers—intimate little affairs of 90 or a couple of hundred guests. Good food and drink, an oasis in Washington's otherwise dry Sabbaths. To Friendship have flocked the chosen senators and congressmen and undersecretaries and administrators and coordinators—the people of influence—the Honorable Joe Governments themselves and their wives, checking their hats and coats at the entrance, being assigned to chatty little tables of four or so for supper, and here the company was mixed up as only a skillful hostess can do. Sourpuss old Senator Isolation might have as his dinner partner the wife of dynamic young Congressman Intervention, and the other couple at the table might be Mr. Big Corporation, a dollar-a-year boy whose company was being persecuted by injunctions and war orders, struggling to make talky-talk with the wife of Mr. Chief Assistant Trust Buster.

But talking politics and lobbying and buttonholing have been barred at Friendship. That has been house rule No. 1. All has been badinage, haute monde and uppity-do.

What do the great and the near-great in Washington talk about when they don't talk politics and issues? Mrs. McLean figured it out long ago. She didn't let 'em talk. She showed 'em movies, first run and hot from Hollywood.

After every one of these Sunday soirees, the Washington newspaper society gals could be counted on to break forth in a gush. . . . "The cream of Washington official society was gathered last night. . . . Here were all the characters for a great play. . . . Ambassadors, statesmen, admirals, generals, and the leaders in the world of business assembled. . . . The hundred most charming and brilliant women of the United States . . . ." And so on for columns. The conversational gems, the state secrets and the words of the great which might be picked up and jotted down on the cuff at one of these affairs would undoubtedly include such nifties as, "Wasn't the supper delicious, dear!" or "Swell picture, Charlie, wasn't it!" Exclamation marks after both of those, you'll note. Statesmen never ask questions, they give out.

All this bonne vivante and high jinks is to end. Friendship, going the way of all things, has been taken over by the gov'nment and will be a site for a housing project for Uncle Sam's nieces—the typewriter and adding machine punchers who will win the war with carbon copies and comptometer.

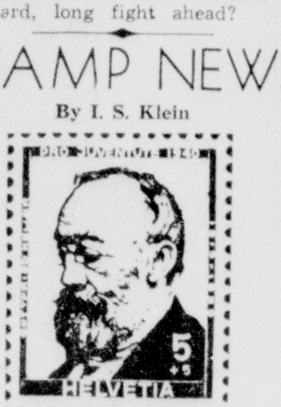
Now this is a worthy cause, but the question arises as to what on earth is the upper crust of official Washington society going to do on Sunday nights, after Friendship has been turned over to the woikin' goils? This is a problem of first magnitude.

A man on the inside of this charmed and charming Friendship set could probably not speak thus frankly on the subject, but if they'll take a tip from a punk standing on the outside of Friendship's high and massive spiked iron fence, there is a way out. The government social planners should make a recreational social project director out of Mrs. McLean, WPA should build her a new Friendship, the USO should provide entertainment, the stamp plan should provide food and the school lunch program should set aside a fund for champagne.

How else can the morale of our Washington leaders be maintained for the hard, long fight ahead?

STAMP NEWS

By I. S. Klein



Swiss Series Honors Heroes of Literature

SWITZERLAND'S "Pro Juventute" stamps, semi-postals first issued in 1913, pay homage each year to persons outstanding in the nation's literature or history.

The stamp above, issued in 1940, honors Gottfried Keller (1819-1890), a celebrated Swiss novelist and poet and who has been called one of the best modern short story writers.

Keller was born in Zurich of parents who, like the parents of so many famous men, were poor. He read widely while a youth and chose painting for his profession.

Illness, poverty and little success in his chosen field forced his return from Munich to Zurich. During the next four years he studied, wrote lyrics, and turned to literature.

From 1850 to 1855 Keller spent lean years in Berlin, but oddly enough, they marked a turning point in his career. He wrote a four-volume biographical novel, and the first volume of his collection of short stories.

His second successful period extended from 1876, when he retired from his office as secretary of the canton in Zurich, to his death in 1890.

He was off for Hollywood next da

To give you an idea of the ki of thing he spends his time on a the kind of reward he gets for h doing, let me tell you of one piece made for Jepson.
It is gold, together with other me als. It represents a gaudy mechanic

Another trifle he made for the sam singer represents a box at the Metropolitan, star-spangled in many color tering the box. They seem to be o enameled metal, with bright colors o

This trifle looks as though it migh

music box piece, done in ordinary metals, retails for $100.

Mosell is somewhere in the late thirties, small, with dark complexion and quiet, reflective eyes. He was born in Spain, and has lived all over Europe. He learned something about designing jewelry in Paris, but mostly he taught himself.
Most of his pieces are big, so heavy that I couldn't see how a lady could wear them without tearing her clothes.
But he knows; else these big-time ladies wouldn't be paying fancy prices for his stuff.
There are many blackout pieces that glow in the dark. Some of these cleverly represent street lamps, while others are animals with glowing eyes.
I don't imagine anybody would think of risking any such pieces in a real blackout, but the idea is there.

LIEUT. SMITH NOW SAFE IN HONOLULU

Announcement of the arrival in Honolulu of Lieutenant Karl N. Smith has been received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Karl L. Smith, 3401 Harrison street.

Lieutenant Smith made the trip from San Diego where he had been stationed as a member of an engineer's battalion at Camp Elliott since October 2.

Smith received his commission as a second lieutenant in the marine corps at Quantico, Va., last spring, then he returned for three months special training in a reserve officer class offered in connection with the marine corps schools. Of the class that graduated September 10, he was the only Louisianian to become a regular commissioned officer.

Lieutenant Smith is a graduate of the Northeast Junior College and Louisiana State University where he majored in journalism. He was a member of the business staff of the Shreveport Journal at the time he resigned to enter the marines.

RNES MAY HEAD ATION'S SUPPLY

was pointed out, when Mr. Roosevelt named Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts head of a commission to investigate the responsibility for failure of the army and navy to be on the alert when the Japanese made their sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

Before his appointment to the court, Byrnes handled many congressional problems for the president and continually was consulted about the often-difficult task of translating general policies into legislation.

There have been growing demands in congress for the appointment of one man to head the twenty or more agencies now concerned with problems of war production and supply.

Sentiment among loyal supporters of the president's program for a move of this nature was manifested when Chairman Connally, Democrat, Texas, of the senate foreign relations committee told reporters he thought a "hard boiled, two-fisted" administrator ought to be named to take over responsibility of production and supply under the president's direction.

Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, said he believed some solution of this nature might be reached through a process of evolution.

"I think things have been moving along satisfactorily," Pepper said, "but I am sure the process of evolution is not complete. The president is trying to work this thing out by the practical method of trial and error and congress ought to leave it up to him.

"After all, the president knows more about the needs and the failings of the present setup than any of us and I am sure that he will work it out."

As evidence that Mr. Roosevelt was giving thought to the problem, one official who asked not to be quoted by name said the president previously had considered possibility of naming Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York, civilian defense director, to the production and supply post.

This idea, however, was said to have been discarded in favor of retaining La Guardia in his present job. The president this week named Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard law school, as "executive" of the OCD, to aid La Guardia.

The 61,190 dead or undelivered letters handled by the United States postoffice department during 1940 contained money to a total of $85,326.69.

THRILLING STORY IS TOLD BY ALLEN

utes and the 45 which followed before I was hoisted, more dead than alive, to a destroyer's deck.

Torpedoes literally chased me up the port side of the Galatea's quarterdeck as I raced to the bridge when the first warning came just about midnight: "First degree readiness heavy armament."

That told the gunners to stand by for action.

The first torpedo crashed aft, just behind me. The second hit amidships. The third tore under me forward as I crossed to starboard.

It was a moment for quick decision. I had never swum a stroke in my life. But I knew, too, that the cruiser might be blown to bits any moment if fire reached her magazines.

Instinctively, I tried to cling to something solid as long as possible as the ship, with mighty convulsions, rapidly tipped over to port.

In those precious seconds before she dipped under the sea, I blew with all the power of my lungs into the lifebelt hanging around my neck, and clutched the starboard rail.

Then, as the cruiser took the plunge, I slipped like a greased pig into the sea and went through the most terrifying, the most agonizing experience of my life.

As I was flung overboard along with hundreds of officers and men, I heard Alexander Massey Anderson, the Reuters naval correspondent, shout something to an officer. I never saw him again.

I was afraid the deep dive would collapse the old lifebelt I was trying to hold high and close to my chest.

But I came up and half a dozen times more I slipped under the oily sea, swallowing what seemed to be gallons of water. Each time I expected would be the last. But somehow, I kept bobbing up again.

The cruiser was gone. She had disappeared with a tremendous suction. The oily lake on the sea was dotted all around with the heads of men.

I battled to live with all the strength I could summon.

I went under once trying to reach a small motorboat several sailors had salvaged. But I came up and a seaman helped me aboard. A score of others had the same idea, however, and the motorboat finally lurched over, dumping us all back into the sea, and sank.

The muscles of my arms and legs were knotted from the cold and my desperate effort. My brain pounded. My throat seemed to be seared with flame.

I repeatedly gasped cries for help, as did the others who remained afloat.

Then at last the towering form of a destroyer loomed just 75 yards ahead.

"Help, I'm drowning," a sailor puffed from the water nearby.

"Keep going," I answered weakly. "Look, there's a destroyer ahead."

He swam toward it, as though with new energy. But I couldn't get closer, try as I did. The waves seemed to carry me further away and I screamed for help.

There is nothing more agonizing than to see rescue at hand yet know that you cannot reach it nor make the searchers see or hear you.

Everything was in utter darkness. They dared not flash a searchlight for fear of an enemy attack.

Limp, exhausted, helpless, I prayed. Then, as though in answer a big wave caught me, swamped me and washed me almost under the destroyer's propeller.

I called for help until I thought my voice would leave me.

Suddenly a long, oily rope dangled over the side. I grasped at it but my strength was gone.

"Hang on, we'll pull you up," an officer shouted.

"Can't," I called, and the rope slipped out of my fingers.

The officer told me to come closer and somehow I did, managing to grip a rope ladder.

I realized that safety was within reach. I held on. But I couldn't even pull myself up the first rung.

Just then a life raft drifted against the destroyer's side and banged my head again and again against the ship.

Sailors on the raft grasped the rope ladder and clambered up, several stepping on my head and pushing me down into the water, while I called on my last strength to keep from drowning.

I kept calling.

At last, a sailor aboard the raft saved my life. He tied a heavy rope under my arms, flung it to the quarterdeck of the warship. Three sailors slowly hoisted me out of the oily mess and flopped me like an exhausted fish, flat on the deck. I was covered from head to foot with thick, oily scum.

I dimly recall hearing someone say, "This fellow's an American," as they pressed the water from my lungs. Then they carried me to the mess deck below and for the next 10 hours I lay on greasy rags and oil soaked clothes, too weak to get on my feet, while the navy searched for the Galatea's survivors and her attacker.

At Alexandria I had to borrow a coat to get ashore. All my clothes, all my money and my typewriter are with the Galatea.

NEWSPAPERS SEND IN CONGRATULATIONS

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Larry Allen's stirring story of his narrow escape from death when the British cruiser Galatea was sunk in the Mediterranean December 16 brought messages of congratulation today from newspapers which printed the detailed account of his harrowing experiences.

"Three cheers for Larry Allen," wired Ben Reese, managing editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, to Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press. "A great reporter. A great experience and a great story."

Dwight S. Perrin, managing editor of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, wired:

"Three more cheers and make 'em loud for Larry Allen's latest, which I hope devoutly won't be his last. Page Richard Harding Davis and Winston Churchill. This guy has got something."

"Allen's story is fine," said C. E. Forgey, of the Ashland (Ky.) Independent.

Allen, a native of Mount Savage, Md., was permitted to tell his story today after the British had officially acknowledged the loss of the Galatea. He had spent some time in an Alexandria hospital suffering from cuts, bruises and shock as a result of 45 minutes in the water.

Arrangements have been made to forward the congratulatory messages to Allen in Alexandria.

GERMANY OFFERS BIG PAY FOR VOLUNTEERS

SOMEWHERE IN THE GERMAN FRONTIER, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Germany is seeking volunteers in Croatia to bolster her forces on the Russian front, promising up to the equivalent of $65 monthly for the families of fighting men, besides the regular wages at the front.

One report says that those volunteering are mostly men seeking "with great difficulty the daily bread with which to feed their families."

RUSSIA CONTINUES TO PRESS ADVANTGAE

LONDON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Like a heavyweight champion keeping his toe off balance, the Soviet army tonight was reported pressing its uninterrupted counter-offensive with conspicuously successful blows in the central sector northwest and southwest of Moscow.

The two arms of the pincers seeking to trap perhaps 100,000 Nazis about Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of the capital, were extended further. Below Mozhaisk the Red army claimed recapture of Mozalsk and to the north the Nazis were said to be retreating from Staritsa toward Rzhev—placing the Soviet advances at least 30 miles beyond Mozhaisk on either side, with the jaws of the pincers drawing ever closer.

In the Staritsa-Rzhev area the Germans apparently were trying to make a stand, for the Moscow radio broadcast a dispatch to the newspaper Izvestia reporting that the Nazis were rushing up planes "and infantry units are being brought up from deep in the rear."

At the same time the Red army thrusts had brought them within 25 miles of the north-south Vyazma-Bryansk railway line, a 140-mile stretch already singled out by British experts as the likely site for the Germans to atempt to marshal their retreating forces for a fortified defensive stand.

Today's brief Soviet communique did not locate any actions, but said Russian advances continued in "a number of sectors," and that the Germans were driven out of "a number of inhabited localities."

(In the Crimea, said the BBC in a broadcast heard in New York by NBC, five German divisions around Sevastopol, Russia's Black sea naval base, "are threatened by Russian drives from the east (where they effected landings at Kerch and Feodosiya) and the north (where they landed at Yevpatoriya).")

(The Swiss radio broadcast a report that the 600-mile Moscow-Rostov railway line, target of frequent Nazi bombings in the Donets basin drive had been reopened.

(The German high command, acknowledging its troops continued on the defensive in the center and north, claimed that Nazi planes had sunk a transport, set fire to a merchant ship and damaged a light cruiser and two merchant ships in Crimean waters—indicating the Russians were continuing to reinforce their counter-thrusts.)

British military experts termed the Germans' failure to hold their lines in the Moscow battle zone as a personal defeat for Adolf Hitler in his self-chosen post as commander in chief, and pointed to a new German military phrase—a "fluid front"—as proof the Nazi armies were unable to stabilize their positions anywhere along the vast front.

The line-straightening excuse for the Nazi withdrawals has now been replaced by this talk of the "fluid front," according to word reaching here from Berlin—and even this irregular line seems doomed, the British feel, since the Germans do not conceal the fact that the Russians continue their assaults, often attacking the Nazi lines in four, six or even eight successive waves.

An indication that the Nazi pool of man-power also may be running low came in a broadcast dispatch from a correspondent for the newspaper Izvestia, who asserted "the huge losses on the eastern front have compelled the German high command to throw into action old men and men under military age."

Another Moscow broadcast pointed up the importance of the positions the Germans have lost by citing an order of the Nazi fifth army commander, found in a staff car abandoned in the German retreat.

"I categorically forbid giving up any position or any village," the order said.

FARM BLOC WINS IN PRICE FIGHT

were the highest in history.

Second, directing that the federal reserve board's index of industrial wages should be used as a factor in calculating parity figures.

The effect of this latter provision, it was explained, was to raise parity about 10 per cent.

Parity is the price at which the agriculture department figures that a farm product has the same purchasing power, in terms of non-farm products, that it had in the 1909-14 period.

The administration was agreeable to two restrictions on ceilings on farm products: That none be set below the average market prices last October 1, and that none be set below 110 per cent of parity.

In addition to the October 1 date, the senate directed that no ceiling be below the average price on December 15.

Thus it wound up forbidding any farm ceiling below:

110 per cent of parity (figured on a basis making it 10 per cent higher than heretofore); the October 1 or December 15 price; or average price in the years 1919-29.

The farm bloc's runaway with the measures had been forecast yesterday when the senate, by a 48 to 37 vote, inserted a provision giving the secretary of agriculture a virtual veto over any farm prices fixed by the administrator empowered by the bill. This ignored a direct request of the president.

The vote by which the senate adopted today an amendment by Senator O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, to the administration price control bill increasing the limits below which a proposed administrator could not fix ceilings on farm prices included:

Democrats for: Bilbo, Doxey, Ellender, Overton.

No one here was prepared to say, in dollars and cents, what the minimum ceiling would be on various farm products under the O'Mahoney method of figuring parity.

In Chicago, where all grain prices advanced slightly, traders estimated wheat could sell as high as $1.57 a bushel. Under the administration's plan, a ceiling could be placed at $1.27.

Here are figures on possible minimum ceilings under the administration's 110 per cent of parity standard and the 1919-29 average respectively:

Beef cattle, $8.25 per 100 pounds for the administration, and $7.18; hogs, $11.44 and $9.77; chickens, 18 cents a pound and 21 cents; eggs, per dozen, 42 cents and 33 cents; wheat, $1.27 per bushel and $1.32; corn, 92 cents a bushel and 89 cents; cotton, per 100 pounds, $19.64 and $21.47.

Thus cotton and wheat farmers would be the chief beneficiaries of the 1919-29 standard.

In brief, the bill provides for a single administrator to fix price ceilings with enforcement by a system of licensing of businesses dealing in affected commodities.

GERMAN LEADERS DENY REBELLION

had spread into Bulgaria, the occupied Baltic states and even into Norway. The recruiting campaign, perhaps, prompted the German paper in Norway, Deutsche Zeitung in Norwegian, to attack Sweden for not aiding Finland and for banning exportation of clothing which Germans in Sweden wanted to send to the Russian front.

As far as the internal German situation goes, it is known here that the first great German failures in the east inspired feelings of concern and unrest at home. However, the correspondents who were called from their beds to hear the telephoned denials of reports of an imminent state of revolution said it was quite apparent that there was no evidence of such a thing in Berlin, and the best information obtainable elsewhere is that no organized effort to revolt exists or is likely to exist soon.

Yet, the correspondents expressed surprise that the drastic form of denial was deemed necessary in the Wilhelmstrasse.

In making its denials, the foreign office blamed the reports on British and American sources. Today the Berlin radio, quoting the Berlin correspondent for the Rumanian newspaper Timpul, said that "rumors of growing dissatisfaction in Germany . . . were launched in the hope of influencing the forthcoming conference (of American foreign ministers) at Rio de Janeiro." By indirection, the broadcast said the rumors had it that machine guns were mounted on the roofs of Berlin hotels, adding that Rumanian journalists in Germany could themselves see that this was not true.

Germany's fountain-heads of public information appeared to be trying to convince Germans that they were talking frankly about what is going on in Russia.

Dr. Otto Dietrich, Hitler's own press chief, told newspaper readers in a universally-published article that German military operations "have entered extremely serious and indeed critical phase." He asked the people to remember that the Fuehrer had led them to victory in the past "and urged them to believe that he would do so again.

"Der Fuehrer will know how to overcome this crisis," said Dietrich.

(It was Dietrich who, last October 9, announced that Soviet Russia was militarily finished as the result of Hitler's "last great decisive" battle of 1941 at Bryansk and Vyasma, a line now threatened by the Russian counter-offensive.)

Echoing Dietrich, the important Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said the toughness of the Russian enemy and the cruel Russian winter "necessitate the last grain of physical and moral courage from our soldiers."

Increasing information from reliable sources tells the story behind all this.

It is that the Nazi army troubles began when Hitler impatiently overruled his then commander in chief, Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch, who presented a plan for withdrawal to the Berezina river, nearly 400 miles west of Moscow, before the real winter set in.

The Fuehrer insisted on pressing ahead. Von Brauchitsch resigned and other officers declined to take the responsibility for a winter struggle on the icy Moscow approaches. Hitler himself took over the army command.

But by that time it was too late. Winter set in in full fury before the construction of barracks was begun in mid-December. The continued Russian offensive forced abandonment of a number of "winter quarters" which, Berlin dispatches have admitted, were modeled after Russian peasant huts.

Subsequently, the German bases were moved much farther back than had been planned. Riga dispatches have told of the commandeering of all available houses, buildings and rooms for the German military, despite the presence of typhus in that Latvian area.

Today, a German agency dispatch saw fit to deny that Germany is building a defense line on the Oder river—well within Germany, paralleling the old Polish border.

Perhaps equal in importance to the stalled German drive in Russia were indications that Nazi plans for political or even military pressure on Turkey have been seriously delayed if not completely disrupted. One traveler leaving Germany for northern Europe said that plans had been made to press the Turks into the Axis fold this month. The Russian counter-invasion of the Crimea delayed this and now any major overtures to Turkey must wait.

Meanwhile, German newspapers made no mention of the important towns which have been recaptured by the Red armies.

From the soldiers themselves came this typical note, contained in a letter home from a German anti-aircraft battery commander:

"All our conversations and thoughts here on the eastern front are centered about one and the same subject: Home leave. . . . Things were different last year. . . . It is better not to have any illusions about home leave . . . thus nobody will be disappointed."

lative framework. Scoffing axis commentators dared not reveal to their peoples the vast scope of that American design for total war. The mere recitation of the figures in planes, tanks and guns to be turned out this year and next would have jarred German, Italian and Japanese eardrums like bomb blasts.

Yet sooner or later the facts both as to the size of the war production program and as to American industrial ability to fashion those weapons will seep through. They will become known in all axis countries about the time the scope of German defeats in Russia and of German-Italian reverses in North Africa also are filtering down to people.

Warnings from London and Washington against placing too much credence in rumors of an internal crisis brewing in Germany are justifiable. There is ample evidence that either a popular uprising or even an effective army command coup to sweep Der Fuehrer into the discard is all but impossible.

Yet this writer has been told by American observers returning from long residence in Berlin and leaving behind them many intimate contracts with German businessmen and their families that in their judgment either of two possible war developments could shake the foundation of Hitler's power and the iron rule of his Nazi regime. A food shortage in Germany was one. The other was a great defeat for German armies the public has been taught to believe invincible.

The test of that may be at hand. Defeat is stalking the German retreat in Russia from Leningrad to the Crimea. In the light of what is happening there realization that the great "crusade" again Communism has failed must be forced upon German public consciousness sooner or later.

There is something almost pathetic in the way Berlin, Rome and Nazi-dominated radio voices in occupied countries enlarge on unofficial Japanese claims of fresh victories in the Far East. The attempt to cover up disasters of growing scope in Russia and in Libya is obvious.

The axis public in Europe as well as in Japan is being fed with flat lies or utter exaggerations certain to have a boomerang effect on morale when the truth comes out. There is a confession of internal weakness in Germany and Italy in that alone.

There are many symptoms that the movement is nearing when effective blows can be struck by American, British and Dutch forces in the China sea zone. British bombing of Japanese bases in Thailand is one. American bomber exploits against a big and heavily guarded Japanese troopship convoy in southern Philippine waters is another.

Desperate and terribly costly Japanese efforts to smash finally American-Filipino forces on Luzon can be ascribed to a time lag in the Nipponese conquest program. Even more desperate and costly efforts to break through to within effective range of the Singapore base have the same meaning. That base must be taken or placed beyond Anglo-American naval use or the whole Tokyo conception of a China sea blitz falls of its own weight. For somewhere forces are mustering to turn the tables in the China sea as they have been turned in Russia and Libya. That is as certain as death and taxes.

ADKINS AGAIN WILL SEEK GOVERNORSHIP

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Governor Homer M. Adkins announced for Democratic renomination tonight, ending speculation that he would run for the United States senate.

Adkins, former United States internal revenue collector for Arkansas and one-time sheriff here, is serving his first two-year term—having been nominated in 1940 over Governor Carl E. Bailey.

Lieutenant Governor Bob Bailey of Russellville, who had been eyeing the governor's office, immediately announced he would seek nomination as congressman for the Fifth district. The incumbent, David D. Terry, Little Rock, has announced as a candidate for United States senator.

was pointed out, when Mr. Roosevelt named Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts head of a commission to investigate the responsibility for failure f the army and navy to be on the ert when the Japanese made their neak attack on Pearl Harbor.

Before his appointment to the court, Byrnes handled many congressional roblems for the president and continually was consulted about the often-difficult task of translating general policies into legislation.

There have been growing demands in congress for the appointment of one man to head the twenty or more agencies now concerned with problems of war production and supply.

Sentiment among loyal supporters of the president's program for a move of this nature was manifested when Chairman Connally, Democrat, Texas, of the senate foreign relations committee told reporters he thought a "hard boiled, two-fisted" administrator ought to be named to take over responsibility of production and supply under the president's direction.

Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, said he believed some solution of this nature might be reached through a process of evolution.

"I think things have been moving along satisfactorily," Pepper said, "but I am sure the process of evolution is not complete. The president is trying to work this thing out by the practical method of trial and error and congress ought to leave it up to him.

"After all, the president knows more about the needs and the failings of the present setup than any of us and I am sure that he will work it out."

As evidence that Mr. Roosevelt was giving thought to the problem, one official who asked not to be quoted by name said the president previously had considered possibility of naming Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York, civilian defense director, to the production and supply post.

This idea, however, was said to have been discarded in favor of retaining La Guardia in his present job. The president this week named Dean James M. Landis of the Harvard law school, as "executive" of the OCD, to aid La Guardia.

The 61,190 dead or undelivered letters handled by the United States postoffice department during 1940 contained money to a total of $85,326.69.

utes and the 45 which followed before I was hoisted, more dead than alive, to a destroyer's deck.

Torpedoes literally chased me up the port side of the Galatea's quarterdeck as I raced to the bridge when the first warning came just about midnight: "First degree readiness heavy armament."

That told the gunners to stand by for action.

The first torpedo crashed aft, just behind me. The second hit amidships. The third tore under me forward as I crossed to starboard.

It was a moment for quick decision. I had never swum a stroke in my life. But I knew, too, that the cruiser might be blown to bits any moment if fire reached her magazines.

Instinctively, I tried to cling to something solid as long as possible as the ship, with mighty convulsions, rapidly tipped over to port.

In those precious seconds before she dipped under the sea, I blew with all the power of my lungs into the lifebelt hanging around my neck, and clutched the starboard rail.

Then, as the cruiser took the plunge, I slipped like a greased pig into the sea and went through the most terrifying, the most agonizing experience of my life.

As I was flung overboard along with hundreds of officers and men, I heard Alexander Massey Anderson, the Reuters naval correspondent, shout something to an officer. I never saw him again.

I was afraid the deep dive would collapse the old lifebelt I was trying to hold high and close to my chest.

But I came up and half a dozen times more I slipped under the oily sea, swallowing what seemed to be gallons of water. Each time I expected would be the last. But somehow, I kept bobbing up again.

The cruiser was gone. She had disappeared with a tremendous suction. The oily lake on the sea was dotted all around with the heads of men.

I battled to live with all the strength I could summon.

I went under once trying to reach a small motorboat several sailors had salvaged. But I came up and a seaman helped me aboard. A score of others had the same idea, however, and the motorboat finally lurched over, dumping us all back into the sea, and sank.

The muscles of my arms and legs were knotted from the cold and my desperate effort. My brain pounded. My throat seemed to be seared with flame.

I repeatedly gasped cries for help, as did the others who remained afloat.

Then at last the towering form of a destroyer loomed just 75 yards ahead.

"Help, I'm drowning," a sailor puffed from the water nearby.

"Keep going," I answered weakly. "Look, there's a destroyer ahead."

He swam toward it, as though with new energy. But I couldn't get closer, try as I did. The waves seemed to carry me further away and I screamed for help.

There is nothing more agonizing than to see rescue at hand yet know that you cannot reach it nor make the searchers see or hear you.

Everything was in utter darkness. They dared not flash a searchlight for fear of an enemy attack.

Limp, exhausted, helpless, I prayed. Then, as though in answer a big wave caught me, swamped me and washed me almost under the destroyer's propeller.

I called for help until I thought my voice would leave me.

Suddenly a long, oily rope dangled over the side. I grasped at it but my strength was gone.

"Hang on, we'll pull you up," an officer shouted.

"Can't," I called, and the rope slipped out of my fingers.

The officer told me to come closer and somehow I did, managing to grip a rope ladder.

I realized that safety was within reach. I held on. But I couldn't even pull myself up the first rung.

Just then a life raft drifted against the destroyer's side and banged my head again and again against the ship.

Sailors on the raft grasped the rope ladder and clambered up, several stepping on my head and pushing me down into the water, while I called on my last strength to keep from drowning.

I kept calling.

At last, a sailor aboard the raft saved my life. He tied a heavy rope under my arms, flung it to the quarterdeck of the warship. Three sailors slowly hoisted me out of the oily mess and flopped me like an exhausted fish, flat on the deck. I was covered from head to foot with thick, oily scum.

I dimly recall hearing someone say, "This fellow's an American," as they pressed the water from my lungs. Then they carried me to the mess deck below and for the next 10 hours I lay on greasy rags and oil soaked clothes, too weak to get on my feet, while the navy searched for the Galatea's survivors and her attacker.

At Alexandria I had to borrow a coat to get ashore. All my clothes, all my money and my typewriter are with the Galatea.

FARM BLOC WINS IN PRICE FIGHT

were the highest in history.

Second, directing that the federal reserve board's index of industrial wages should be used as a factor in calculating parity figures.

The effect of this latter provision, it was explained, was to raise parity about 10 per cent.

Parity is the price at which the agriculture department figures that a farm product has the same purchasing power, in terms of non-farm products, that it had in the 1909-14 period.

The administration was agreeable to two restrictions on ceilings on farm products: That none be set below the average market prices last October 1, and that none be set below 110 per cent of parity.

In addition to the October 1 date, the senate directed that no ceiling be below the average price on December 15.

Thus it wound up forbidding any farm ceiling below:

110 per cent of parity (figured on a basis making it 10 per cent higher than heretofore); the October 1 or December 15 price; or average price in the years 1919-29.

The farm bloc's runaway with the measures had been forecast yesterday when the senate, by a 48 to 37 vote, inserted a provision giving the secretary of agriculture a virtual veto over any farm prices fixed by the administrator empowered by the bill. This ignored a direct request of the president.

The vote by which the senate adopted today an amendment by Senator O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, to the administration price control bill increasing the limits below which a proposed administrator could not fix ceilings on farm prices included:

Democrats for: Bilbo, Doxey, Ellender, Overton.

No one here was prepared to say, in dollars and cents, what the minimum ceiling would be on various farm products under the O'Mahoney method of figuring parity.

In Chicago, where all grain prices advanced slightly, traders estimated wheat could sell as high as $1.57 a bushel. Under the administration's plan, a ceiling could be placed at $1.27.

Here are figures on possible minimum ceilings under the administration's 110 per cent of parity standard and the 1919-29 average respectively:

Beef cattle, $8.25 per 100 pounds for the administration, and $7.18; hogs, $11.44 and $9.77; chickens, 18 cents a pound and 21 cents; eggs, per dozen, 42 cents and 33 cents; wheat, $1.27 per bushel and $1.32; corn, 92 cents a bushel and 89 cents; cotton, per 100 pounds, $19.64 and $21.47.

Thus cotton and wheat farmers would be the chief beneficiaries of the 1919-29 standard.

In brief, the bill provides for a single administrator to fix price ceilings with enforcement by a system of licensing of businesses dealing in affected commodities.

had spread into Bulgaria, the occupied Baltic states and even into Norway. The recruiting campaign, perhaps, prompted the German paper in Norway, Deutsche Zeitung in Norwegian, to attack Sweden for not aiding Finland and for banning exportation of clothing which Germans in Sweden wanted to send to the Russian front.

As far as the internal German situation goes, it is known here that the first great German failures in the east inspired feelings of concern and unrest at home. However, the correspondents who were called from their beds to hear the telephoned denials of reports of an imminent state of revolution said it was quite apparent that there was no evidence of such a thing in Berlin, and the best information obtainable elsewhere is that no organized effort to revolt exists or is likely to exist soon.

Yet, the correspondents expressed surprise that the drastic form of denial was deemed necessary in the Wilhelmstrasse.

In making its denials, the foreign office blamed the reports on British and American sources. Today the Berlin radio, quoting the Berlin correspondent for the Rumanian newspaper Timpul, said that "rumors of growing dissatisfaction in Germany . . . were launched in the hope of influencing the forthcoming conference (of American foreign ministers) at Rio de Janeiro." By indirection, the broadcast said the rumors had it that machine guns were mounted on the roofs of Berlin hotels, adding that Rumanian journalists in Germany could themselves see that this was not true.

Germany's fountain-heads of public information appeared to be trying to convince Germans that they were talking frankly about what is going on in Russia.

Dr. Otto Dietrich, Hitler's own press chief, told newspaper readers in a universally-published article that German military operations "have entered extremely serious and indeed critical phase." He asked the people to remember that the Fuehrer had led them to victory in the past "and urged them to believe that he would do so again.

"Der Fuehrer will know how to overcome this crisis," said Dietrich.

(It was Dietrich who, last October 9, announced that Soviet Russia was militarily finished as the result of Hitler's "last great decisive" battle of 1941 at Bryansk and Vyasma, a line now threatened by the Russian counter-offensive.)

Echoing Dietrich, the important Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said the toughness of the Russian enemy and the cruel Russian winter "necessitate the last grain of physical and moral courage from our soldiers."

Increasing information from reliable sources tells the story behind all this.

It is that the Nazi army troubles began when Hitler impatiently overruled his then commander in chief, Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch, who presented a plan for withdrawal to the Berezina river, nearly 400 miles west of Moscow, before the real winter set in.

The Fuehrer insisted on pressing ahead. Von Brauchitsch resigned and other officers declined to take the responsibility for a winter struggle on the icy Moscow approaches. Hitler himself took over the army command.

But by that time it was too late. Winter set in in full fury before the construction of barracks was begun in mid-December. The continued Russian offensive forced abandonment of a number of "winter quarters" which, Berlin dispatches have admitted, were modeled after Russian peasant huts.

Subsequently, the German bases were moved much farther back than had been planned. Riga dispatches have told of the commandeering of all available houses, buildings and rooms for the German military, despite the presence of typhus in that Latvian area.

Today, a German agency dispatch saw fit to deny that Germany is building a defense line on the Oder river—well within Germany, paralleling the old Polish border.

Perhaps equal in importance to the stalled German drive in Russia were indications that Nazi plans for political or even military pressure on Turkey have been seriously delayed if not completely disrupted. One traveler leaving Germany for northern Europe said that plans had been made to press the Turks into the Axis fold this month. The Russian counter-invasion of the Crimea delayed this and now any major overtures to Turkey must wait.

Meanwhile, German newspapers made no mention of the important towns which have been recaptured by the Red armies.

From the soldiers themselves came this typical note, contained in a letter home from a German anti-aircraft battery commander:

"All our conversations and thoughts here on the eastern front are centered about one and the same subject: Home leave. . . . Things were different last year. . . . It is better not to have any illusions about home leave . . . thus nobody will be disappointed."

lative framework. Scoffing axis commentators dared not reveal to their peoples the vast scope of that American design for total war. The mere recitation of the figures in planes, tanks and guns to be turned out this year and next would have jarred German, Italian and Japanese eardrums like bomb blasts.

Yet sooner or later the facts both as to the size of the war production program and as to American industrial ability to fashion those weapons will seep through. They will become known in all axis countries about the time the scope of German defeats in Russia and of German-Italian reverses in North Africa also are filtering down to people.

Warnings from London and Washington against placing too much credence in rumors of an internal crisis brewing in Germany are justifiable. There is ample evidence that either a popular uprising or even an effective army command coup to sweep Der Fuehrer into the discard is all but impossible.

Yet this writer has been told by American observers returning from long residence in Berlin and leaving behind them many intimate contracts with German businessmen and their families that in their judgment either of two possible war developments could shake the foundation of Hitler's power and the iron rule of his Nazi regime. A food shortage in Germany was one. The other was a great defeat for German armies the public has been taught to believe invincible.

The test of that may be at hand. Defeat is stalking the German retreat in Russia from Leningrad to the Crimea. In the light of what is happening there realization that the great "crusade" again Communism has failed must be forced upon German public consciousness sooner or later.

There is something almost pathetic in the way Berlin, Rome and Nazi-dominated radio voices in occupied countries enlarge on unofficial Japanese claims of fresh victories in the Far East. The attempt to cover up disasters of growing scope in Russia and in Libya is obvious.

The axis public in Europe as well as in Japan is being fed with flat lies or utter exaggerations certain to have a boomerang effect on morale when the truth comes out. There is a confession of internal weakness in Germany and Italy in that alone.

There are many symptoms that the movement is nearing when effective blows can be struck by American, British and Dutch forces in the China sea zone. British bombing of Japanese bases in Thailand is one. American bomber exploits against a big and heavily guarded Japanese troopship convoy in southern Philippine waters is another.

Desperate and terribly costly Japanese efforts to smash finally American-Filipino forces on Luzon can be ascribed to a time lag in the Nipponese conquest program. Even more desperate and costly efforts to break through to within effective range of the Singapore base have the same meaning. That base must be taken or placed beyond Anglo-American naval use or the whole Tokyo conception of a China sea blitz falls of its own weight. For somewhere forces are mustering to turn the tables in the China sea as they have been turned in Russia and Libya. That is as certain as death and taxes.

ADKINS AGAIN WILL SEEK GOVERNORSHIP

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Governor Homer M. Adkins announced for Democratic renomination tonight, ending speculation that he would run for the United States senate.

Adkins, former United States internal revenue collector for Arkansas and one-time sheriff here, is serving his first two-year term—having been nominated in 1940 over Governor Carl E. Bailey.

Lieutenant Governor Bob Bailey of Russellville, who had been eyeing the governor's office, immediately announced he would seek nomination as congressman for the Fifth district. The incumbent, David D. Terry, Little Rock, has announced as a candidate for United States senator.

Eve Bradford's CHAT COLUMN

THE NEW year is trotting along and we find life very much as it was before the fateful day—December 7. We are eating just as well, enjoying life in our homes, attending our favorite movies. We get up at the same time, get to work at the same time, meet the same people and argue about the same subjects. Our ordinary life hasn't been restricted to any great extent. Frankly we are calm and confident now that the first flurry of nervousness is over.

Our days are busier, naturally, but we seem to find time to assist with the great national defense project and to still keep the social ball rolling merrily. This is exactly as it should be. The social side of life should be stressed now as never before. The bright flame of traditional southern hospitality for which we have been famed since time immemorial, should never be allowed to turn to ashes. And above all don't postpone buying that new hat, a new dress or new furniture if you can afford it. If you can't buy new clothes then remodel the old. Don't let the new forces that are continually coming into our lives undermine our health and happiness. A new hat, a new dress and a facial has helped many a woman through dark, despairing periods of life.

May our gracious way of living, socially, continue through the years is the wish of every southerner today. Without pomp and ceremony, lavishness or fanfare but with all the old familiar quiet charm associated with the deep south. It takes the hurly-burly of life in cities to the north to make us count our blessings.

Our gracious way of living has influenced many southerners, now residing elsewhere, to return to the land of their birth with their grandchildren so that they may become acquainted with the south's special brand of hospitality. Mrs. E. E. Harlan who lived in Monroe many years ago has never forgotten how charming was the social side of life. During the holidays she arrived in Monroe with her beautiful granddaughter, Elizabeth Grisso of Oklahoma City, and found that southern hospitality had lost none of its flavor. Elizabeth was charmingly entertained and especially lovely was the dinner party in her honor in the C. B. Braun home. The Brauns' lovely sub-deb daughter, Ann, presided gracefully over the dinner table fragrant with flowers and mellow with candlelight.

Mrs. David Weingarden of Detroit, Mich., was given her first taste of southern hospitality during the holidays. She was born and reared in Michigan and has traveled extensively, yet she had never visited Louisiana. The Monroe friends of Dr. Weingarden welcomed his charming wife with open arms and planned dinner parties and cocktail parties in her honor. She was introduced for the first time to our very special dishes and expressed herself as being delighted with our shrimp gumbo, our cafe brulot and beaten biscuits. Even our cane syrup, without which a southerner could never survive the winter, was much to her liking. She found the Creole pralines, purchased in New Orleans, something to really rave about.

Pat (Dryburgh) Ryan, home from Ann Arbor, Mich., is introducing her beautiful little daughter, Sally, to all her old friends. Sally's hair is golden brown and curls in ringlets all over her head in the most engaging manner. She is winsome and friendly but her friendliness was put to the acid test when she was introduced for the first time to a colored mammy who has served the Dryburgh household for years. However, colored mammies have certain little ways with children and before the day had passed Sally was cuddling happily in the arms of the nurse. Pat is preparing against the day when Sally and her nurse will be separated. She fears a battle royal.

Mrs. E. E. Carroll trotted around with her handsome son, Ensign Charles Payne, during the holidays. He was graduated from Annapolis Naval academy last month and accompanied his mother back to Monroe following graduation.

Mrs. Carroll was present at her son's graduation and thrilled to the time-honored customs observed in spite of a "June-time in December" graduation. She and Sunshine Shehee of Arcadia, who accompanied her to Annapolis, attended teas, receptions and the farewell ball at Dahlgren hall. They heard the address made by Secretary Knox and managed to capture one of the senior's caps when they were tossed into the air in traditional manner. The biggest thrill of all for Mrs. Carroll was hearing the name of her son called and watching him receive his diploma. She has every reason to feel proud as Ensign Payne has made a splendid record at Annapolis.

There was great confusion following commencement as most graduates were immediately assigned for war duty. Ensign Payne returned to Annapolis following his holiday visit in Monroe to serve as instructor in marine engineering at the academy for the time being.

Every red-blooded American read with interest last week of the American flag being raised again at Cavite, Philippine islands. None, however, was more deeply concerned than Alma Apperson whose cousin, Lieutenant Brunby, was privileged to raise the American flag for the first time in the Philippines, May 3, 1898, immediately after Admiral Dewey's great victory in the battle of Manila bay.

Rummaging through some old newspapers Mrs. Apperson discovered the article with the information concerning her cousin. It reads as follows:

"Lieutenant Brumby, immediately after the terms of capitulation had been signed, hurried off to lower the Spanish flag, in reality to lower all Spanish flags in the islands by taking one down.

"He was accompanied by two signal men from the Olympia. This little party found its way after considerable difficulty into Port Santiago, in the northern portion of the walled city.

"There a large Spanish flag was flying. Grouped around it were many Spanish officers. Brumby's presence there in the victor's uniform attracted a crowd from the streets.

"They hissed Lieutenant Brumby when he approached to haul down the flag. Then the Stars and Stripes rose in place of the other. Many of those present wept bitterly as the flag of the victorious stranger climbed into place above the fort.

"Fearing lest the crowd might lower Old Glory, the lieutenant asked an American infantry officer to move up a detachment to guard it. Fortunately a company arrived on the scene at this moment. The infantry presented arms and the band played The Star Spangled Banner, which lent considerable eclat to the ceremony."

Isabel (M. C.) Thompson tells of the anxious moments spent before word came from her father, Alfred Kingsley Christensen of Mobile, Ala., who was bound for Sydney, Australia, when war was declared. His ship was ordered to sail to the nearest port, which happened to be New Caledonia. A cheery message arrived Christmas morning stating that "all was well." The mantle of gloom hanging over the Thompson menage, where Mrs. Thompson's mother and grandmother of Mobile, Ala., spent the holidays, was immediately lifted. Mr. Christensen is with the United States shipping board.

A talk on nutrition, stressing the importance of proper diet, during a period of dissent was made by Mrs. P. L. Perot.

Her summary of the life is much the same as Mable Stark's. She says, "I've enjoyed the excitement, the danger and the business of matching wits with the criminal element.

"I've found few things in the world more thrilling than the moment of revealing myself to a trapped and startled crook as a woman detective. One almost feels that these intrepid women would rather be killed in line of duty than live to a retired old age by the chimney corner."

Members present were Mesdames O. A. Easterling, W. M. Harper, B. M. McKoin, P. L. Perot, A. D. Tisdale, Herbert Breard, Whorton Brown, Duncan Cook, C. K. Crondall, H. E. Dickard, and the hostess Mrs. Sandridge.

Eve Bradford's CHAT COLUMN

THE NEW year is trotting along and we find life very much as it was before the fateful day—December 7. We are eating just as well, enjoying life in our homes, attending our favorite movies. We get up at the same time, get to work at the same time, meet the same people and argue about the same subjects. Our ordinary life hasn't been restricted to any great extent. Frankly we are calm and confident now that the first flurry of nervousness is over.

Our days are busier, naturally, but we seem to find time to assist with the great national defense project and to still keep the social ball rolling merrily. This is exactly as it should be. The social side of life should be stressed now as never before. The bright flame of traditional southern hospitality for which we have been famed since time immemorial, should never be allowed to turn to ashes. And above all don't postpone buying that new hat, a new dress or new furniture if you can afford it. If you can't buy new clothes then remodel the old. Don't let the new forces that are continually coming into our lives undermine our health and happiness. A new hat, a new dress and a facial has helped many a woman through dark, despairing periods of life.

May our gracious way of living, socially, continue through the years is the wish of every southerner today. Without pomp and ceremony, lavishness or fanfare but with all the old familiar quiet charm associated with the deep south. It takes the hurly-burly of life in cities to the north to make us count our blessings.

Our gracious way of living has influenced many southerners, now residing elsewhere, to return to the land of their birth with their grandchildren so that they may become acquainted with the south's special brand of hospitality. Mrs. E. E. Harlan who lived in Monroe many years ago has never forgotten how charming was the social side of life. During the holidays she arrived in Monroe with her beautiful granddaughter, Elizabeth Grisso of Oklahoma City, and found that southern hospitality had lost none of its flavor. Elizabeth was charmingly entertained and especially lovely was the dinner party in her honor in the C. B. Braun home. The Brauns' lovely sub-deb daughter, Ann, presided gracefully over the dinner table fragrant with flowers and mellow with candlelight.

Mrs. David Weingarden of Detroit, Mich., was given her first taste of southern hospitality during the holidays. She was born and reared in Michigan and has traveled extensively, yet she had never visited Louisiana. The Monroe friends of Dr. Weingarden welcomed his charming wife with open arms and planned dinner parties and cocktail parties in her honor. She was introduced for the first time to our very special dishes and expressed herself as being delighted with our shrimp gumbo, our cafe brulot and beaten biscuits. Even our cane syrup, without which a southerner could never survive the winter, was much to her liking. She found the Creole pralines, purchased in New Orleans, something to really rave about.

Pat (Dryburgh) Ryan, home from Ann Arbor, Mich., is introducing her beautiful little daughter, Sally, to all her old friends. Sally's hair is golden brown and curls in ringlets all over her head in the most engaging manner. She is winsome and friendly but her friendliness was put to the acid test when she was introduced for the first time to a colored mammy who has served the Dryburgh household for years. However, colored mammies have certain little ways with children and before the day had passed Sally was cuddling happily in the arms of the nurse. Pat is preparing against the day when Sally and her nurse will be separated. She fears a battle royal.

Mrs. E. E. Carroll trotted around with her handsome son, Ensign Charles Payne, during the holidays. He was graduated from Annapolis Naval academy last month and accompanied his mother back to Monroe following graduation.

Mrs. Carroll was present at her son's graduation and thrilled to the time-honored customs observed in spite of a "June-time in December" graduation. She and Sunshine Shehee of Arcadia, who accompanied her to Annapolis, attended teas, receptions and the farewell ball at Dahlgren hall. They heard the address made by Secretary Knox and managed to capture one of the senior's caps when they were tossed into the air in traditional manner. The biggest thrill of all for Mrs. Carroll was hearing the name of her son called and watching him receive his diploma. She has every reason to feel proud as Ensign Payne has made a splendid record at Annapolis.

There was great confusion following commencement as most graduates were immediately assigned for war duty. Ensign Payne returned to Annapolis following his holiday visit in Monroe to serve as instructor in marine engineering at the academy for the time being.

Every red-blooded American read with interest last week of the American flag being raised again at Cavite, Philippine islands. None, however, was more deeply concerned than Alma Apperson whose cousin, Lieutenant Brunby, was privileged to raise the American flag for the first time in the Philippines, May 3, 1898, immediately after Admiral Dewey's great victory in the battle of Manila bay.

Rummaging through some old newspapers Mrs. Apperson discovered the article with the information concerning her cousin. It reads as follows:

"Lieutenant Brumby, immediately after the terms of capitulation had been signed, hurried off to lower the Spanish flag, in reality to lower all Spanish flags in the islands by taking one down.

"He was accompanied by two signal men from the Olympia. This little party found its way after considerable difficulty into Port Santiago, in the northern portion of the walled city.

"There a large Spanish flag was flying. Grouped around it were many Spanish officers. Brumby's presence there in the victor's uniform attracted a crowd from the streets.

"They hissed Lieutenant Brumby when he approached to haul down the flag. Then the Stars and Stripes rose in place of the other. Many of those present wept bitterly as the flag of the victorious stranger climbed into place above the fort.

"Fearing lest the crowd might lower Old Glory, the lieutenant asked an American infantry officer to move up a detachment to guard it. Fortunately a company arrived on the scene at this moment. The infantry presented arms and the band played The Star Spangled Banner, which lent considerable eclat to the ceremony."

Isabel (M. C.) Thompson tells of the anxious moments spent before word came from her father, Alfred Kingsley Christensen of Mobile, Ala., who was bound for Sydney, Australia, when war was declared. His ship was ordered to sail to the nearest port, which happened to be New Caledonia. A cheery message arrived Christmas morning stating that "all was well." The mantle of gloom hanging over the Thompson menage, where Mrs. Thompson's mother and grandmother of Mobile, Ala., spent the holidays, was immediately lifted. Mr. Christensen is with the United States shipping board.

It was a congenial company of guests who speared olives in the iced martinis during Mr. and Mrs. Bill Fudickar's cocktail party in their hospitable home in Bastrop last week. Bill's brother, Paul Fudickar was ordered to report for duty with the United States government last week and for several days before he left the social ball was kept rolling merrily in his honor. "I've found few things in the world more thrilling than the moment of revealing myself to a trapped and startled crook as a woman detective. One almost feels that these intrepid women would rather be killed in line of duty than live to a retired old age by the chimney corner."

In making the trip to Ruston there is one basic aim of these famed lecturers, which is expressed in part by Dr. Myers: "So many highly emotional, un-American appeals are rampant in the world today that it taxes the perceptions of our younger generation. We must fight to maintain this cherished American heritage . . . we must thoroughly impress these ideals on those who will constitute the American citizenry of the future."

Dr. Myers is a distinguished educator, having had a diversified experience as writer, teacher and public speaker on subjects pertaining to child well-being. He has won a national reputation as psychological consultant, newspaper columnist and editor.

While in Ruston, Dr. and Mrs. Myers will also speak to groups of students at L. P. I. Vegetables Are Again 'Blue' Stamp Foods

Fresh vegetables are again listed as "blue" stamp foods on the surplus marketing adminstration's January food list. Cauliflower, cabbage, carrots, okra, peas, tomatoes, squash and other fresh vegetables all high in vitamin contents, and can be purchased with blue stamps by clients of the food stamp program.

However, everyone is being urged to eat more fresh vegetables because of their high vitamin content and their supply of calcium and iron. It is all part of the national educational campaign to improve America's health defense.

Mr. E. N. Thompson, chairman of the Ouachita parish food industry committee, speaking of the local campaign said, "Our local homemakers are doing their share in this important campaign. All of us are asking what can we do? Well, for one thing, housewives can prepare and serve health-building nourishing meals to their families every day—thereby helping their families to be strong healthy Americans. I think the following food facts about vegetables taken from a publication issued by the bureau of home economics, United States department of agriculture will reveal some interesting facts regarding vegetables."

"Carrots, according to nutritionists, are an excellent source of vitamin A. The coloring matter in carrots is a yellow pigment known as carotene. The body changes this carotene into vitamin A. Carrots are also a good source of vitamin G and of calcium.

Today, cabbage is cooked for minutes instead of hours. Short cooking saves the delicate cabbage flavor and the crisp texture. And the stale cabbage odor doesn't linger in the house. Best of all—the short-time cooking prevents the loss of food values.

Shredded cabbage cooked in milk is a good way to get a lot of food values into a single dish. To the cabbage and milk, add some melted fat and salt for flavor and a little flour for thickening. You'll have to stir the cabbage constantly—but that's not bad, because you only cook it for five minutes.

Ruston Women's Club Announces Program

Events which have been anticipated with enthusiasm during the club season of the Women's Department club, Ruston, will take place in January.

Coming to Ruston from Shreveport where she will have been presented in a series of lecture-demonstrations, Laura Lee Burroughs, authority and expert on flower arranging will be presented by the American home department of which Mrs. J. C. Ritchie is chairman. Assisting Mrs. Ritchie will be Mrs. Wyatt Hadley and Mrs. Glen Laskey of the program and lecture committee. The lecture will take place in the club rooms in the James building beginning promptly at 3:30, Thursday, January 15. Members will be admitted on membership cards and nonmembers for the usual club fee.

The program will be followed by an informal tea, planned by the general chairman, Mrs. Edwards Willis.

On January 19, Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph. D., and Mrs. Myers will be presented in dialogue, "Personality Development in Children." Dr. and Mrs. Myers, editors of Children's Activities, come to Ruston from Austin, Tex., where they have spent the holidays visiting with children and grandchildren.

In making the trip to Ruston there is one basic aim of these famed lecturers, which is expressed in part by Dr. Myers: "So many highly emotional, un-American appeals are rampant in the world today that it taxes the perceptions of our younger generation. We must fight to maintain this cherished American heritage . . . we must thoroughly impress these ideals on those who will constitute the American citizenry of the future."

Dr. Myers is a distinguished educator, having had a diversified experience as writer, teacher and public speaker on subjects pertaining to child well-being. He has won a national reputation as psychological consultant, newspaper columnist and editor.

While in Ruston, Dr. and Mrs. Myers will also speak to groups of students at L. P. I. As they will receive no commercial benefit, the courtesy is extended to the public to attend the club's program without fee. Tea will follow the program, which will take place in the club rooms in the James building at 3:30.

Mrs. J. R. Fowler, chairman of the child study division, will present Dr. and Mrs. Myers.

Vegetables Are Again 'Blue' Stamp Foods

Fresh vegetables are again listed as "blue" stamp foods on the surplus marketing adminstration's January food list. Cauliflower, cabbage, carrots, okra, peas, tomatoes, squash and other fresh vegetables all high in vitamin contents, and can be purchased with blue stamps by clients of the food stamp program.

However, everyone is being urged to eat more fresh vegetables because of their high vitamin content and their supply of calcium and iron. It is all part of the national educational campaign to improve America's health defense.

Mr. E. N. Thompson, chairman of the Ouachita parish food industry committee, speaking of the local campaign said, "Our local homemakers are doing their share in this important campaign. All of us are asking what can we do? Well, for one thing, housewives can prepare and serve health-building, nourishing meals to their families every day—thereby helping their families to be strong healthy Americans. I think the following food facts about vegetables taken from a publication issued by the bureau of home economics, United States department of agriculture will reveal some interesting facts regarding vegetables."

"Carrots, according to nutritionists, are an excellent source of vitamin A. The coloring matter in carrots is a yellow pigment known as carotene. The body changes this carotene into vitamin A. Carrots are also a good source of vitamin G and of calcium.

Today, cabbage is cooked for minutes instead of hours. Short cooking saves the delicate cabbage flavor and the crisp texture. And the stale cabbage odor doesn't linger in the house. Best of all—the short-time cooking prevents the loss of food values.

Shredded cabbage cooked in milk is a good way to get a lot of food values into a single dish. To the cabbage and milk, add some melted fat and salt for flavor and a little flour for thickening. You'll have to stir the cabbage constantly—but that's not bad, because you only cook it for five minutes.

Mrs. J. L. Dennis Discusses Care Of Plants Before Welcome Garden Clu

Group Meets At Home Of Mrs. H. V. Collins

House Shrubs Need Sun, Moisture, and Thrive In 60-Degree Temperature, Says Speaker

The Welcome Garden club held its January meeting in the home of the president, Mrs. H. V. Collins, 1413 North Second street. At the conclusion of business session the program for the afternoon was presented as follows:

Mrs. J. L. Dennis gave a splendid paper on "The Winter Care of Plants." She said in part:

At this season special attention should be directed to house plants, in order to keep them in a thriving condition. House plants, as a rule, are adversely affected by cold drafts and this should be kept in mind when opening doors and windows of rooms containing plants. Even the smallest quantity of fuel gas will sicken the majority of house plants. Blooming plants may be set on the floor at night during ordinary winter weather to give them a rest from the overheated rooms of the daytime. A good practice on cold nights is to pull down the shades behind the plants and cover them with newspapers to protect them from drafts. Do all plant watering in the morning and let foliage go to sleep dry.

House plants need plenty of sun, even ferns like a little winter sun. Many house plants suffer from the lack of humidity. Most house plants thrive in a temperature between 60 and 70 degrees.

A good potting soil may be made by using one part sand, one part well rotted manure, two parts garden soil and one half cupful of bone-meal.

Gift plants, so healthy looking when they arrive, often begin to lose their petals and foliage the next day. This is usually due to the lack of fresh air, improper drainage and improper watering. Here are a few basic rules to follow. Ventilate the room two or three times daily or remove the plants ten minutes, twice daily, to a room where fresh air may be admitted freely without lowering the temperature below 50 degrees. Always put the plants in a well-ventilated room for the night. Water as often as the surface of the soil becomes dry enough to show cracks but before these cracks actually open. Always give water slowly and until it soaks through the entire mass of earth and roots and runs out through the hole in the pot.

Many of the quick-rooting bulbs procured at seed stores or florists can be placed in bowls every 10 days for a succession of blooms for the house.

January is also a good month to clean up the flower beds, burning all the rubbish not needed for the compost heap. Then with the new seed catalogs and garden magazines at hand, plan your spring plantings.

Mrs. John Harper read the report on civilian defense that was made by the National Council of State Garden Clubs. This report discusses what the organization is doing for national defense, what they could do and how they could do it. Briefly, up to the present the 4,000 garden clubs of the federation are contributing to the war effort through a variety of activities which are not necessarily dependent on their skill as gardeners. Garden club leaders being allied with other public service, have made their contributions to the immediate demands as mobile food kitchens, hundreds of pounds of seeds, thousands of bundles, knitted garments, etc., to Britain, bandages for the Red Cross, funds for the U. S. O., etc. But to date there is no specific national program for garden clubs which uses the skill for growing things for which the organization is banded.

Second, what could be done? If food is needed, 150,000 women could raise enough vegetables for 1 per cent of the population of America. A garden club member usually has a family, a home and a plot of ground to cultivate, so that 1,000,000 people, not considering the hundreds of junior garden clubs, could come directly under the food producing activities. If she raises food for her home use only, she could increase the total food supply to the United States by a percentage sufficient to be a considerable factor against inflation. Her surplus could be canned. So garden club members can help to augment our country's needs if the food supply is endangered.

Direction must be given by those in our government who are in authority and have knowledge of the country's greatest needs. If they feel it more important for members to supply products from the soil than to make the contributions that are now being made through other channels, then the National Council of State Garden Clubs, being a loyal body of citizens are ready for the job.

Mrs. J. F. Prendergast, scrap book chairman, asked members to complete their scrap books on various subjects.

It was decided that the club hold all future meetings at 9:30 a.m. on the first Monday of each month, the next meeting place to be announced later.

Those present were Mrs. Jack Bagwell, Mrs. John Best, Mrs. F. E. Black, Mrs. H. V. Collins, Mrs. C. A. Caldwell, Mrs. Henson Coon, Mrs. J. L. Dennis, Mrs. J. R. Fuller, Mrs. Ralph H. B. ● SERIAL STORY

TAMBAY GOLD

BY SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER VII

"My great-grandmother married into Tambay," Maurie Sears told her.

"Yes. I know." Juddy said. "That makes us something, doesn't it?"

"I remember Cousin Selene, as a boy," he said. "She was right beautiful. Anyone could tell you were her daughter. She married out of the South." He couldn't quite keep out of his voice that Selene Maurie had smeared the Tambay escutcheon by taking up with a Yankee.

"Maybe you won't want to claim me for a relative when you know what I'm here for." And she let him have it.

The shock wiped his family smile clean off. "Tambay?" he said. "A tourist camp? Tambay!"

"I thought maybe Feederia might have broken you in to the idea," I said.

He never looked at me. "We all thought the—the barbecue wagon was temporary. I can't see why this lady should want to settle in a place like Tambay."

"Keep the sob out of your throat and I'll tell you, pal," I said. "It's the old back-to-the-soil yen. Believe it or not, I'm a sucker for nature. Birds, bees and butterflies, they get me down. Well, show me a place where nature's had its own way for more than at Tambay!"

Juddy gave that little, low chuckle of hers. "Sweetbriar and the mossy mortgage," she said.

For a while young Mr. Sears gave an impersonation of the chief mourner at a Maurie funeral until he found it got him nowhere. Then he listened while Juddy explained that she only wanted to know what she could do with the property in case; nothing was settled. That cheered him a little. But pretty soon that handsome face of his filled up again with Grade-A reproach.

"You have a right pleasant lot of kin folks around here, Cousin," he said. "I reckon there would be some sore feelings over this."

"Mom," Juddy said, "look out. We're liable to get ourselves cut by the county."

"I don't mean that," he said. But of course he did.

"Another thing, while I'm here," she said. "The Hanging Tree is on Tambay property, isn't it?"

"Yes. Why?"

"I'm going to have it cut down."

"No," he said, and his voice was hard. "That you can't do."

"Why can't I?"

"Nobody in the country would dare touch that tree."

"Then I'll send away and get someone."

"He'd be killed," he said quietly.

She was getting white around the lips. "I believe you believe in these horrible lynchings!"

I knew the answer before he spoke. "Strangers don't understand these things." It's more than half true, too.

Before things could get meaner, I cut in. "Then the University can't gum up any building plans, can they?"

"Not as long as you don't encroach," he said. "That's a 99-year lease. It runs out next year. It gives them the right of aboriginal research only. All subsoil rights except the Indian discoveries are reserved to Tambay." He smiled at Juddy. "So, Cousin, if Loren Oliver strikes an ore-lode, you can legally claim the gold."

Juddy smiled back at him. I guess she figured that we'd been pretty rough with him. "Do you believe there's gold at Tambay?"

"No, I don't. But plenty do. There are probably people panning Tambay stream right now. By the way, has Hollister Mowry been around to see you yet?"

"No. Who is he?"

"He's one of the believers in the Tambay gold legend. He's sheriff."

"I know him," I said. "He ambled in the other day to size me up. He's got green-gold teeth and grease in his smile and he dishes out a hot line of halfway questions. Come to think of it, he hinted around at having a family interest in Tambay. How does he get that way?"

Sears looked embarrassed. "I reckon he's right, in a way. It's a—well, a branch of the family. Mowry—Maurie; the name got changed when his line went west."

"Then he's really a cousin?" Juddy said.

He hesitated and then he said: "As a matter of fact, I'm afraid he is. The fifth Maurie of Tambay—that's our great-great-grandfather, yours and mine and his—had a right affectionate nature and casual habits. He left quite a number of descendants carelessly around the neighborhood. One of them founded the Mowry line. This latest one, Hollister, picked up a bit of money, mining in Colorado, came back here and went in for politics."

"I'll have to meet up with my sheriff-cousin," she said. "Do you think if I went to him and gave him the clan grip and the Maurie password, he'd come to the aid of the party?"

Mr. Maurie Sears took it seriously. "You could count on him. He's a queer mixture. In a political or business deal he'd cut his best friend's throat without a quiver. But if you were in trouble and appealed to him on the ground of kin, he'd move heaven and earth for you. After all, the Maurie blood is there, Cousin."

"You needn't call me Cousin. Juddy will do," she said. I wondered whether she caught the look in his eyes. I did.

It struck me that Juddy was having a pretty good time for herself with the Welliver lads, without taking on any extra swains. The Feederia was sure doing business with that institution. Angel Todd ate with us too often for a bird that was paying regular board somewhere else, and so did his four pals in the bonds of Chi Rho Gamma. Several times Juddy went over to the college blowouts, but not always with the same boy. Angel had the inside track, though.

Several times I watched them together, and the queer way she'd look at him had me guessing. Sometimes I thought she was crazy about him. Then again, she seemed to be trying to figure out something. I knew Angel's reputation with the gals. Far be it from me to heave the first rock; women make it tough for a swell-looking athlete like Angel Todd; a certain kind of women. Juddy wasn't that kind though, if I'm any judge. So what? Nobody had pinned a badge on me to be Guardian of the Pure. They were both free, white and 21. One quiet evening while we were washing up she said, "Mom, I think I've been propositioned."

"Then it isn't Angel," I said. "If it had been him, there wouldn't be any 'think' about it."

"It is Angel. He wants me to go with him over next week-end to visit some friends. My theory is that the friends won't be there when we arrive."

"Well, you're going, aren't you?" I was trying her out.

"Is that your advice?"

"I give advice when I'm asked for it."

"All right; I'm asking."

"My theory is that any gal who goes out with that sweet lad had better keep her feet on the ground," I told her.

"So?" said Juddy thoughtfully.

"I'm a wise old bird," I said. "On the other hand, if you can't get him out of your system any other way, and are looking for experience, that's something else again."

"Looking?" she said, and those straight, strong, pretty brows of hers drew down. "I'm not exactly a dewy young debutante, Mom."

I wasn't quite sure what she was trying to tell me. She didn't say any more at the time.

JUNIOR COLLEGE IN U. S. DEFENSE

Dean Colvert Reports On Important Convention Held In Baltimore

Junior colleges in national defense was the keynote of the annual meeting of American Association of Junior Colleges held this year in Baltimore, January 2-4.

Dean C. C. Colvert, member of the executive committee, attended the session and later went to Washington to confer with officials on the civil pilot training program and possibilities of offering a course in aviation mechanics at the local college.

Two of the most significent features of the convention program, Dr. Colvert said, were an address on "Junior Colleges and National Defense," by Colonel John N. Andrews, reemployment division, national selective service system, and a discussion of "The Place of the Junior Colleges in Defense Savings," by Orville S. Poland, staff assistant to the secretary of the treasury.

The chief speaker at the banquet Friday, January 2, was Malcolm MacDonald, high commissioner for the United Kingdom to Canada.

At a meeting of the publicly controlled junior colleges Dr. Colvert was one of the leaders in discussing "How Can Public Junior Colleges Help Most Effectively In Total War?"

College and university presidents conferred January 3 and 4 on education and defense. Speakers at the meeting included Paul V. McNutt, administrator, federal security agency; Joseph W. Barker, chief division of training, liaison, and coordination, and Brigadier-General Lewis B. Hershey, director selective service system.

Resolutions adopted at the defense meeting Sunday emphasized that hereafter business will not be carried on as usual. Delegates recommended that college courses be speeded up; college work continue through the summer; physical conditions of students be stressed; conservation of foods be emphasized, and curricula be broadened to include technical courses in engineering and radio, and other courses in defense.

John Harberson, Pasadena Junior College, was elected president of the American Association of Junior Colleges and Jesse P. Bogue, Green Mountain Junior College, Poultney, Vt., was chosen vice-president.

'Alien Enemies' Theme Of U. S. District Attorney

Lafargue Warns Against Unjust Discrimination Against Foreign Born

"Alien Enemies" was the theme of an important talk delivered by United States Attorney Malcolm E. Lafargue, over radio station KWKH, Shreveport, Friday night. He said in part:

"The country is at war. Every American will share in the task of defending our country. This means, above all, keeping our heads, keeping our tempers, and keeping clearly in mind that we are defending freedom, justice and decency.

"First I would explain something about the word 'alien.' It is simply a person residing among us who is not a citizen of the United States. He may have taken out first citizenship papers, he may have an application for first or final citizenship papers; but he is still an alien. Today but three and one-half per cent of our 130 million population are aliens. The majority of our aliens have already proved their devotion to our institutions and to democratic principles.

"Second I want to make clear what is meant by 'enemy alien.' An enemy alien is a person still a citizen of a nation with which the United States is at war. The total number of German, Italian and Japanese nationals, technically known as enemy aliens, is approximately 1,100,000. Of this number, the department of justice has found it necessary to apprehend less than one-half of one per cent, fewer than 3,000, as possibly dangerous to national security. By presidential decree, among other things, regulations provide that no alien enemy shall have in his possession firearms or other war implements; short wave receiving or transmitting sets, cameras, drawings or photographs of military or naval equipment. Regulations prohibit travel of enemy aliens by airplane and they exclude them from certain specified areas related to defense. This is necessary but should not be considered a reflection on the loyalty of a vast number of German, Italian and Japanese aliens in this country.

"Incidentally some aliens have mistakenly construed that all travel is banned. The department of justice explains that there is nothing to forbid an alien to travel within the boundary of the community in which he resides; or from commuting to and from his home and place of business; or going to and from church, school, college or other place of learning which he attends regularly. Permission to take trips must be obtained by making written application to the United States attorney a week in advance.

"Citizens who want to do something about persons whose activities seem harmful to the interests of the nation, should report this information to the nearest F. B. I. office.

"After an alien enemy is apprehended by the F. B. I., he is turned over to the immigration and naturalization service for temporary custody. Alien enemies now in custody will be held until their cases can be heard by alien enemy hearing boards which have been established in all sections of the country. Each board is made up of three citizens from civilian life named by the attorney general of the United States. They serve at $1 a year. Their job is to hear cases. Each alien enemy will have opportunity to state facts of his case and to submit, if desired, affidavits in his behalf. He may be accompanied by some relatives if desired. After a board has heard a case, one of three recommendations will be made to the United States attorney-general. He may be released unconditionally; be paroled or interned.

"Regardless of what disposition is made of an alien enemy, the department of justice expects citizens to take no action themselves. We do not want to initiate the practices of dictator-ridden countries.

"The belief that a German or Italian non-citizen cannot become a citizen for the duration of the war is incorrect. Nothing prevents a German or Italian alien from filing first or second papers at any time. If a German or Italian alien did not have applications pending last December 6, he cannot become naturalized unless exempted by the president from the enemy alien classification.

"American employers should bear in mind that it is the policy of the government not to discriminate against the employment of workers in defense industries because of race, creed, color or national origin.

"Attorney-General Biddle has the following to say: 'The defense of our country will be hurt not helped, by any persecution of non-citizens. If we create the feeling among aliens that they are not wanted here, we shall endanger our national unity. Such an impression could only give aid and comfort to those enemies whose aim it is to infect us with distrust of each other and turn aliens in America against America. To do this would be to defeat what we ourselves are defending.'"

HARVARD UNIVERSITY TO GIVE EDUCATION

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 10.—(Special)—"To train highly promising young men for service to the nation," a free Harvard education will be offered this spring in open competition through national scholarships for high school seniors in 17 states in the middle west, south and far west, Harvard announced Saturday.

The scholarships carry maximum stipends of $4,600 for the four-year course and may be renewed at $1,200 a year for graduate study. High school seniors must apply by February 20 and the winners, numbering at least 30, will be announced in May.

The best applicants are chosen regardless of their financial circumstances, officials explained. Then the stipend is adjusted individually according to need, with a maximum of $1,000 in the first year and $1,200 annually thereafter for boys whose families cannot pay anything for their college education.

The Louisiana student now at Harvard who came on a national scholarship is Jackson L. Thatcher, West Monroe, Ouachita Parish High.

PENNY-A-PLANE GROWS RAPIDLY

Idea, Initiated By Y's Men Here, Plans For 10,000 Members

The "Penny-a-Plane" club, launched by the Y's Men's club two weeks ago, is beginning to get into full swing. At this time no accurate figures are available, but more than 2,000 members have been enrolled and the goal set is for 10,000 members in Ouachita parish.

The success of the project, Y's Men declare, depends on the broadness of its scope for it costs each members so little and yet in the aggregate is so large that it becomes an important factor when carried out extensively. Up to date 36 axis planes have been reported officially as brought down.

Clifton Furlow, publicity director of the local club, stated: "Who is there among us who wouldn't pay a penny for each enemy plane brought down by American armed forces? Think what it would mean if every time an enemy plane is brought down the United States treasury department would receive an outright donation of enough money to buy at least one new plane for our government! It can easily develop into this with everybody cooperating. Let us all get back of this club and put it over in a big way.

"The Y's Men's club keenly feels the importance of the project, having to date yielded 12 members of the club to the service of Uncle Sam, one of whom has already made the supreme sacrifice by giving his life. Other members are scheduled to go into service soon. They feel deeply honored to be asked to sponsor such a worthy cause."

The club urges the cooperation of all groups and organizations in the Twin Cities. Any individual or group can take out a charter membership pledge by phoning any member of the club. As 36 planes have been to date shot down, the fee to join the group is but 36 cents. John Scott, Y's Men's club member, has been named to receive members. His phone is 1288. A complete list of places where containers will be placed will be given in the News-Star and Morning World in a few days. To date, about 50 containers are placed at business houses. More will be placed rapidly.

At each container will be listed the number of planes shot down for that day. This will be the sum in pennies that will be required of Penny-a-Day plane members.

Tickets also will probably be placed at downtown business houses, where new members can join.

Word from Washington states that the government is pleased to welcome this project. A similar plan was used with success in England. Later it is said to have spread to the Argentine and later still it was initiated by a man in Marshall, Tex., and now is used in many parts of the United States with ever increasing popularity and assurance of success.

TAMBAY GOLD

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER VII

"My great-grandmother married into Tambay," Maurie Sears told her.

"Yes, I know," Juddy said. "That makes us something, doesn't it?"

"I remember Cousin Selene, as a boy," he said. "She was right beautiful. Anyone could tell you were her daughter. She married out of the South." He couldn't quite keep out of his voice that Selene Maurie had smeared the Tambay escutcheon by taking up with a Yankee.

"Maybe you won't want to claim me for a relative when you know what I'm here for." And she let him have it.

The shock wiped his family smile clean off. "Tambay?" he said. "A tourist camp? Tambay!"

"I thought maybe Feederia might have broken you in to the idea," I said.

He never looked at me. "We all thought the—the barbecue wagon was temporary. I can't see why this lady should want to settle in a place like Tambay."

"Keep the sob out of your throat and I'll tell you, pal," I said. "It's the old back-to-the-soil yen. Believe it or not, I'm a sucker for nature. Birds, bees and butterflies, they get me down. Well, show me a place where nature's had its own way for more than at Tambay!"

Juddy gave that little, low chuckle of hers. "Sweetbriar and the mossy mortgage," she said.

For a while young Mr. Sears gave an impersonation of the chief mourner at a Maurie funeral until he found it got him nowhere. Then he listened while Juddy explained that she only wanted to know what she could do with the property in case; nothing was settled. That cheered him a little. But pretty soon that handsome face of his filled up again with Grade-A reproach.

"You have a right pleasant lot of kin folks around here, Cousin," he said. "I reckon there would be some sore feelings over this."

"Mom," Juddy said, "look out. We're liable to get ourselves cut by the county."

"I don't mean that," he said. But of course he did.

"Another thing, while I'm here," she said. "The Hanging Tree is on Tambay property, isn't it?"

"Yes. Why?"

"I'm going to have it cut down."

"No," he said, and his voice was hard. "That you can't do."

"Why can't I?"

"Nobody in the country would dare touch that tree."

"Then I'll send away and get someone."

"He'd be killed," he said quietly.

She was getting white around the lips. "I believe you believe in these horrible lynchings!"

I knew the answer before he spoke. "Strangers don't understand these things." It's more than half true, too.

Before things could get meaner, I cut in. "Then the University can't gum up any building plans, can they?"

"Not as long as you don't encroach," he said. "That's a 99-year lease. It runs out next year. It gives them the right of aboriginal research only. All subsoil rights except the Indian discoveries are reserved to Tambay." He smiled at Juddy. "So, Cousin, if Loren Oliver strikes an ore-lode, you can legally claim the gold."

Juddy smiled back at him. I guess she figured that we'd been pretty rough with him. "Do you believe there's gold at Tambay?"

"No, I don't. But plenty do. There are probably people panning Tambay stream right now. By the way, has Hollister Mowry been around to see you yet?"

"No. Who is he?"

"He's one of the believers in the Tambay gold legend. He's sheriff."

"I know him," I said. "He ambled in the other day to size me up. He's got green-gold teeth and grease in his smile and he dishes out a hot line of halfway questions. Come to think of it, he hinted around at having a family interest in Tambay. How does he get that way?"

Sears looked embarrassed. "I reckon he's right, in a way. It's a—well, a branch of the family. Mowry—Maurie; the name got changed when his line went west."

"Then he's really a cousin?" Juddy said.

He hesitated and then he said: "As a matter of fact, I'm afraid he is. The fifth Maurie of Tambay—that's our great-great-grandfather, yours and mine and his—had a right affectionate nature and casual habits. He left quite a number of descendants carelessly around the neighborhood. One of them founded the Mowry line. This latest one, Hollister, picked up a bit of money, mining in Colorado, came back here and went in for politics."

"I'll have to meet up with my sheriff-cousin," she said. "Do you think if I went to him and gave him the clan grip and the Maurie password, he'd come to the aid of the party?"

Mr. Maurie Sears took it seriously. "You could count on him. He's a queer mixture. In a political or business deal he'd cut his best friend's throat without a quiver. But if you were in trouble and appealed to him on the ground of kin, he'd move heaven and earth for you. After all, the Maurie blood is there, Cousin."

"You needn't call me Cousin. Juddy will do," she said. I wondered whether she caught the look in his eyes. I did.

It struck me that Juddy was having a pretty good time for herself with the Welliver lads, without taking on any extra swains. The Feederia was sure doing business with that institution. Angel Todd ate with us too often for a bird that was paying regular board somewhere else, and so did his four pals in the bonds of Chi Rho Gamma. Several times Juddy went over to the college blowouts, but not always with the same boy. Angel had the inside track, though.

Several times I watched them together, and the queer way she'd look at him had me guessing. Sometimes I thought she was crazy about him. Then again, she seemed to be trying to figure out something. I knew Angel's reputation with the gals. Far be it from me to heave the first rock; women make it tough for a swell-looking athlete like Angel Todd; a certain kind of women. Juddy wasn't that kind though, if I'm any judge. So what? Nobody had pinned a badge on me to be Guardian of the Pure. They were both free, white and 21. One quiet evening while we were washing up she said, "Mom, I think I've been propositioned."

"Then it isn't Angel," I said. "If it had been him, there wouldn't be any 'think' about it."

"It is Angel. He wants me to go with him over next week-end to visit some friends. My theory is that the friends won't be there when we arrive."

"Well, you're going, aren't you?" I was trying her out.

"Is that your advice?"

"I give advice when I'm asked for it."

"All right; I'm asking."

"My theory is that any gal who goes out with that sweet lad had better keep her feet on the ground," I told her.

"So?" said Juddy thoughtfully.

"I'm a wise old bird," I said. "On the other hand, if you can't get him out of your system any other way, and are looking for experience, that's something else again."

"Looking?" she said, and those straight, strong, pretty brows of hers drew down. "I'm not exactly a dewy young debutante, Mom."

I wasn't quite sure what she was trying to tell me. She didn't say any more at the time.

'Alien Enemies' Theme Of U. S. District Attorney

Lafargue Warns Against Unjust Discrimination Against Foreign Born

"Alien Enemies" was the theme of an important talk delivered by United States Attorney Malcolm E. Lafargue, over radio station KWKH, Shreveport, Friday night. He said in part:

"The country is at war. Every American will share in the task of defending our country. This means, above all, keeping our heads, keeping our tempers, and keeping clearly in mind that we are defending freedom, justice and decency.

"First I would explain something about the word 'alien.' It is simply a person residing among us who is not a citizen of the United States. He may have taken out first citizenship papers, he may have an application for first or final citizenship papers; but he is still an alien. Today but three and one-half per cent of our 130 million population are aliens. The majority of our aliens have already proved their devotion to our institutions and to democratic principles.

"Second I want to make clear what is meant by 'enemy alien.' An enemy alien is a person still a citizen of a nation with which the United States is at war. The total number of German, Italian and Japanese nationals, technically known as enemy aliens, is approximately 1,100,000. Of this number, the department of justice has found it necessary to apprehend less than one-half of one per cent, fewer than 3,000, as possibly dangerous to national security. By presidential decree, among other things, regulations provide that no alien enemy shall have in his possession firearms or other war implements; short wave receiving or transmitting sets, cameras, drawings or photographs of military or naval equipment. Regulations prohibit travel of enemy aliens by airplane and they exclude them from certain specified areas related to defense. This is necessary but should not be considered a reflection on the loyalty of a vast number of German, Italian and Japanese aliens in this country.

"Incidentally some aliens have mistakenly construed that all travel is banned. The department of justice explains that there is nothing to forbid an alien to travel within the boundary of the community in which he resides; or from commuting to and from his home and place of business; or going to and from church, school, college or other place of learning which he attends regularly. Permission to take trips must be obtained by making written application to the United States attorney a week in advance.

"Citizens who want to do something about persons whose activities seem harmful to the interests of the nation, should report this information to the nearest F. B. I. office.

"After an alien enemy is apprehended by the F. B. I., he is turned over to the immigration and naturalization service for temporary custody. Alien enemies now in custody will be held until their cases can be heard by alien enemy hearing boards which have been established in all sections of the country. Each board is made up of three citizens from civilian life named by the attorney general of the United States. They serve at $1 a year. Their job is to hear cases. Each alien enemy will have opportunity to state facts of his case and to submit, if desired, affidavits in his behalf. He may be accompanied by some relatives if desired. After a board has heard a case, one of three recommendations will be made to the United States attorney-general. He may be released unconditionally; be paroled or interned.

"Regardless of what disposition is made of an alien enemy, the department of justice expects citizens to take no action themselves. We do not want to initiate the practices of dictator-ridden countries.

"The belief that a German or Italian non-citizen cannot become a citizen for the duration of the war is incorrect. Nothing prevents a German or Italian alien from filing first or second papers at any time. If a German or Italian alien did not have applications pending last December 6, he cannot become naturalized unless exempted by the president from the enemy alien classification.

"American employers should bear in mind that it is the policy of the government not to discriminate against the employment of workers in defense industries because of race, creed, color or national origin.

"Attorney-General Biddle has the following to say: 'The defense of our country will be hurt not helped, by any persecution of non-citizens. If we create the feeling among aliens that they are not wanted here, we shall endanger our national unity. Such an impression could only give aid and comfort to those enemies whose aim it is to infect us with distrust of each other and turn aliens in America against America. To do this would be to defeat what we ourselves are defending.' "

HARVARD UNIVERSITY TO GIVE EDUCATION

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 10.—(Special)—"To train highly promising young men for service to the nation," a free Harvard education will be offered this spring in open competition through national scholarships for high school seniors in 17 states in the middle west, south and far west, Harvard announced Saturday.

The scholarships carry maximum stipends of $4,600 for the four-year course and may be renewed at $1,200 a year for graduate study. High school seniors must apply by February 20 and the winners, numbering at least 30, will be announced in May.

The best applicants are chosen regardless of their financial circumstances, officials explained. Then the stipend is adjusted individually according to need, with a maximum of $1,000 in the first year and $1,200 annually thereafter for boys whose families cannot pay anything for their college education.

The Louisiana student now at Harvard who came on a national scholarship is Jackson L. Thatcher, West Monroe, Ouachita Parish High.

MANY TONGUES

PENNY-A-PLANE GROWS RAPIDLY

Idea, Initiated By Y's Men Here, Plans For 10,000 Members

The "Penny-a-Plane" club, launched by the Y's Men's club two weeks ago, is beginning to get into full swing. At this time no accurate figures are available, but more than 2,000 members have been enrolled and the goal set is for 10,000 members in Ouachita parish.

The success of the project, Y's Men declare, depends on the broadness of its scope for it costs each members so little and yet in the aggregate is so large that it becomes an important factor when carried out extensively. Up to date 36 axis planes have been reported officially as brought down.

Clifton Furlow, publicity director of the local club, stated: "Who is there among us who wouldn't pay a penny for each enemy plane brought down by American armed forces? Think what it would mean if every time an enemy plane is brought down the United States treasury department would receive an outright donation of enough money to buy at least one new plane for our government! It can easily develop into this with everybody cooperating. Let us all get back of this club and put it over in a big way.

"The Y's Men's club keenly feels the importance of the project, having to date yielded 12 members of the club to the service of Uncle Sam, one of whom has already made the supreme sacrifice by giving his life. Other members are scheduled to go into service soon. They feel deeply honored to be asked to sponsor such a worthy cause."

The club urges the cooperation of all groups and organizations in the Twin Cities. Any individual or group can take out a charter membership pledge by phoning any member of the club. As 36 planes have been to date shot down, the fee to join the group is but 36 cents. John Scott, Y's Men's club member, has been named to receive members. His phone is 1288. A complete list of places where containers will be placed will be given in the News-Star and Morning World in a few days. To date, about 50 containers are placed at business houses. More will be placed rapidly.

At each container will be listed the number of planes shot down for that day. This will be the sum in pennies that will be required of Penny-a-Day plane members.

Tickets also will probably be placed at downtown business houses, where new members can join.

Word from Washington states that the government is pleased to welcome this project. A similar plan was used with success in England. Later it is said to have spread to the Argentine and later still it was initiated by a man in Marshall, Tex., and now is used in many parts of the United States with ever increasing popularity and assurance of success.

Powell And Sothern Are Co-Starred

Robert Young Also In Outstanding Cast Of New Musical Film

THE MOST UNUSUAL dance routines ever devised for a Hollywood musical are done by "Tap Queen" Eleanor Powell in "Lady Be Good," MGM's new musical, in which she stars with Ann Sothern and Robert Young on the Paramount screen. Also in the cast are Lionel Barrymore, John Carroll, Red Skelton and Virginia O'Brien.

Miss Powell, who last revealed her dancing prowess with Fred Astaire in "Broadway Melody of 1940," has a number of surprises up her sleeve in her dancing role of the new musical, among them a "Tap Concerto," given its name by no less a personage than Arturo Toscanini, who saw the number on a visit to the MGM studios, a Boogie-Woogie routine, and a startlingly original number in which she dances with Buttons, a trained dog.

Probably most spectacular of the dances takes place in the picture's finale on one of the largest sets ever built for a motion picture musical. In the form of an elaborate night club, it covered more than 2,000 square feet of floor space, with the top of the set towering sixty feet above the floor.

A feature of the setting is a curtain of fine silk which serpentines on a rack high at the top of the stage. The curtain, before which Miss Powell does her intricate' Boogie-Woogie number, follows the star as she travels about the stage. It pulls in and out to reveal at different moments, five pianos set on the stage at various angles.

Gradually it separates, resolving itself into shimmering pillars. Miss Powell stops before each pillar in the course of her routine, striking a definite pose at each one. As she moves on, the silhouette of that pose remains. At the conclusion, each pillar is ornamented by a silhouette.

Taking part in the number, in addition to Miss Powell, is Ann Sothern, who sings one of the production's ballads. The Berry Brothers, well-known vaudeville team, appear in a fast-moving sketch. Phil Silvers and Virginia O'Brien do a comedy routine, in addition to a song by Miss O'Brien sung in her original "dead-pan" style. Red Skelton, Hollywood's newest funny-man, John Carroll and Robert Young, all have major parts in the finale, which is climaxed by the singing of "Fascinating Rhythm" by the newest blues-singing "discovery," Connie Russell.

Other highlights of the picture's musical program include Miss Sothern's singing of the popular hit, "The Last Time I Saw Paris," her duet with John Carroll in "You'll Never Know," and Carroll's singing of "Your Words and My Music."

"Lady Be Good" is based on an original story by Jack McGowan. The picture was directed by Norman McLeod and was produced by Arthur Freed, who gave the screen such earlier musical successes as "Babes in Arms" and "Strike Up the Band."

Weavers And Elviry Now At Capitol

Popular Vaudeville Favorites Starred In 'Tuxedo Junction'

THE Weaver Brothers and Elviry, popular favorites of the vaudeville stage for over two decades, return to the screen in another rollicking, down-to-earth picture for Republic. "Tuxedo Junction," which plays today only at the Capitol theater, places the Weavers on a California truck farm in the arroyo immediately beneath the estate of an irascible millionaire, one Douglas Gordon, played by Thurston Hall. Lorna Gray takes the role of Gordon's daughter, Joan, who is innately a good sort, but whose point of view is somewhat warped by her snobbish upbringing.

The Weaver family and the Gordons clash when three teen age migrant boys—Frankie Darro, Ken Lundy and Billy Benedict—are unjustly accused of attempting to steal Joan's new car, and take refuge with the Weavers when the cops pursue them. Abner Weaver, played by Clayton Moore, convinces the judge that the boys are not criminals and, much to the annoyance of Gordon, persuades him to parole them into the Weavers' custody.

Gordon, annoyed by the influx of lads on the property adjoining his own, regards it his civic duty to get rid of the "hoodlums" by fair means or foul, and it means little to him that the boys are being rehabilitated under the kindly, understanding influence of Abner, Cicero and Elviry Weaver.

A silver screen replica of the famed "Tournament of Roses" parade is a promised high light of the film, with the Weavers' proteges constructing one of the prize winning floats.

The film was directed by Frank McDonald under Associate Producer Armand Schaefer.

All the favorite stage tunes of "Lady Be Good" are made sparkling with such stellar personalities as Ann "Maisie" Sothern, Eleanor Powell, Red Skelton, Robert Young and New Orlean's John Carroll, opening today at the Paramount for three days.

Judy Canova and Francis Lederer now at the Joy theater in "Puddin' Head."

"Tuxedo Junction," which plays today only at the Capitol theater, places the Weavers on a California truck farm in the arroyo immediately beneath the estate of an irascible millionaire, one Douglas Gordon, played by Thurston Hall. Lorna Gray takes the role of Gordon's daughter, Joan, who is innately a good sort, but whose point of view is somewhat warped by her snobbish upbringing.

The Weaver family and the Gordons clash when three teen age migrant boys—Frankie Darro, Ken Lundy and Billy Benedict—are unjustly accused of attempting to steal Joan's new car, and take refuge with the Weavers when the cops pursue them. Abner Weaver, played by Clayton Moore, convinces the judge that the boys are not criminals and, much to the annoyance of Gordon, persuades him to parole them into the Weavers' custody.

Gordon, annoyed by the influx of lads on the property adjoining his own, regards it his civic duty to get rid of the "hoodlums" by fair means or foul, and it means little to him that the boys are being rehabilitated under the kindly, understanding influence of Abner, Cicero and Elviry Weaver.

A silver screen replica of the famed "Tournament of Roses" parade is a promised high light of the film, with the Weavers' proteges constructing one of the prize winning floats.

The film was directed by Frank McDonald under Associate Producer Armand Schaefer.

It's "The Feminine Touch" that counts and the experts giving each other lessons are Don Ameche, Rosalind Russell, Kay Francis, and hiding are Van Heflin and Donald Meek. Their antics are riotous and whether it is a touchdown or a touch-off, it's "The Feminine Touch" that counts. Lessons commence on the Paramount screen Wednesday with graduation on Thursday.

GOLF ASSOCIATION CANCELS ALL TOURNEYS

LINKS BODY WILL DEVOTE ENERGIES TO WAR PROGRAM

Series Of Meets For Benefit Of Military Forces Planned By Group

By Judson Bailey

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The United States Golf association abandoned all four of its national championships today in order to focus its entire attention on the nation's war effort.

After cancelling its 1942 tournament program, the governing body of golf immediately went into action in behalf of the government, changing the USGA by-laws to permit amateurs to receive up to $100 in defense bonds and stamps as prizes instead of cups and trophies, planning a nation-wide series of club tournaments on holidays, and proposing exhibition matches for war relief and defense.

The sweeping action was the most drastic regimentation for the support of the war any national sports governing body has yet taken.

The 1942 championships cancelled were:

National Open, June 18-20, Interlachen Country club, Minneapolis.

National Amateur, September 7-12, Del Monte Golf and Country club, Pebble Beach course, Del Monte, Calif.

Women's Amateur, September 21-26, Southern Hills Country club, Tulsa, Okla.

National Public Links, July 27-August 1, Wellshire Municipal Golf course, Denver, Colo.

This action was decided upon by the executive committee yesterday and approved by the association today. Several reasons were advanced for the course, which duplicated the USGA's cancellation of its national tournaments during the last World War.

First was the desire of the officers to give their complete attention to exhibitions and other golf competition for the benefit of war charities.

Joseph C. Dey, Jr., executive secretary of the USGA, pointed out that preparations for and handling of the qualifying tournaments and the big national events ordinarily would have occupied the full forces of the association.

Second was the belief that the competitions themselves would not have been of championship caliber. Military service already has claimed most of the leading amateur golfers—National Champion Bud Ward, Frank Strafaci, Dick Chapman, Tommy Tailer and others—without whom the title competition would not amount to much either in honor or as a spectacle.

Also the absence of the star amateurs would leave the National Open little more than a medal play tournament for professional golfers. Some prominent women golfers were known to be active in civilian defense work and unlikely to compete in a national tournament.

Because of the considerations involved all the national championships were acted upon as a unit, with no effort made to hold one while dropping others.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(Wide World)—A departing spectator looked up at the Madison Square Garden marquee last night and remarked: "Huh, 15 rounds!" . . . A lot of the folks up in the $7 seats didn't get much for their dough, but those close up agreed that Buddy Baer had courage to match his 250-pound body. . . . When he went down the third time his head bounced a couple of inches and blood started to run from his nose. He couldn't get up, but he rolled to the ropes and was hauling himself onto his feet when Referee Frank Fullam counted 10. . . . The first time Louis landed that one-two Buddy seemed to be counting more stars than there were on all the flags hung from the roof—and there must have been a hundred of them. . . . Joe was munching a big red apple when the sports writers reached his dressing room after the fight. He took the apple and Baer with about the same effort.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

Jim Rasmusen, Ironwood (Mich.) Daily Globe: "Joe Louis recently said he was worried about his golf and the war, but not about fighting. Last night he convinced Buddy Baer that he must be worried about the Japanese, too. He took it out on the first 'chap' he could get into the ring."

RINGSIDE RAMBLE

Mike Jacobs didn't waste an inch of space in the Garden that could be sold (the aisles never were narrower), but he wouldn't say the word "sell-out" as long as there was an unsold seat. . . . Earliest arrivals were some British sailors, who were on hand two hours before the first prelim. . . . Someone asked them if they'd rather watch Louis or fight a German submarine. They said "Louis—that will be a real fight." . . . Referee Fullam followed out the patriotic note in his instructions, saying, "We know you boys fight the American way, which is the clean way." . . . There wasn't much ermine in the ringside section but the navy came through with lots of gold braid. Except for such guys as Jim Farley and Joe DiMaggio there weren't many of the "regulars" sitting down front. . . . The gallery boys kept quiet when Wendell Willkie called the champ "Joe Looey" but they really howled when he said "Max Baer."

HEARD ON THE BEACH

First sports scribe: "I hear Man Mountain Dean got back into the army because a general who knew him when he was in before said he was a damn good soldier."

Second ditto: "He ought to be twice as good now—there's twice as much of him."

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

Jimmy Wasdell still is more than a little peeved at Leo Durocher's story that he missed a bunt sign during the world series. Recently he told Cleveland friends, "I thought it was funny at the time, but he told me to go up there and bust one. And he said 'bust'—not 'bunt.'" . . . Jimmy also says one reason for the coolness between the Dodgers and Camilli was that Dolf raised cain with Durocher for blaming Wasdell. . . . The next tennis player to leave the amateurs for the hard cash department likely will be Wayne Sabin. He may enter some of the pro tourneys in Florida this winter. . . . Louis is planning a quick vacation at his Stevensville, Mich., place but he will be back east to see his stablemate, Holman Williams, fight the Cocoa Kid at Baltimore on the 19th.

One of the complaints at the recent football coaches' convention was the lack of new jokes, but Bob Zuppke managed to get a laugh from the boys when he remarked: "In football, the road to glory leads but to the gravy.'

CORBY AND LARUE ON MAT PROGRAM AT LOCAL ARENA

Fraley And Cazell Matched In Semi-Final Event Here Tuesday Night

It will be Bob Corby, Atlanta mean man, vs. Jack LaRue of Sioux City in the main event of this week's wrestling card at the Ouachita Valley Fair grounds arena. The semi-final will show Mike Fraley of Omaha, Neb., against Bill Cazell of Amarillo, Tex. A boxing royal of white boys in the 150 to 160-pound class will open the card, which is being sponsored by the Burnett Downes post of the American Legion.

Corby won his bout last week with Jack Curtis of Vicksburg but had his purse held up by the local wrestling commissioner because of the shady methods he employed. Those tactics also caused several women fans to attack the Atlanta lad and made it necessary for him to have police protection when he left the ring after the final fall.

A return match with Curtis will be necessary before Corby can secure his last week's purse and he will have to perform to the satisfaction of the commissioner or forfeit the purse altogether.

But this Jack LaRue doesn't seem to be as easy going as Curtis. While he has never had any but clean scientific bouts here, there have been instances where he indicated that he could and would get plenty rough if the occasion demanded.

Recently LaRue has beaten Sugi Hayamaka, clever 'Frisco grappler, and came very near beating Balk Estes. For a man of his size, the Sioux City grappler is extremely fast and has an excellent assortment of holds which he applies in a very neat manner.

Mike Fraley lost to Whitie Grovo here several weeks ago but showed that he was a good matman, just the same. All fans who saw Grovo perform will agree that no man can put forth his best abilities against such fouls as Grovo employs.

Bill Cazell, who meets Fraley in the semi-final, wrestled here about two years ago. In one semi-final match he wrestled von Bromberg to a draw. In another match he beat Ted Taylor. He uses a mixed style of grappling and doesn't seem to have any preference.

Promoter Gus Kallio said that he hopes in the near future he can have the Monroe American Legion sponsor a wrestling card.

THREE NET STARS EYE FIRST PRIZE

Riggs, Kovacs, Budge Certain They'll Cop Top Place In Tennis Tour

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—If all four of the touring tennis pros don't win first prize in their current barnstorming series, three of them are going to be more disappointed than Alexis Thompson, the wealthy sportsman who backed the cross country outing to the tune of a cool $100,000.

Relaxing here at the fag end of their eastern swing, the members of the top-ranking court quartet agreed that there's nothing wrong with the trip that a few thousand customers couldn't cure.

But that's as far as their agreeing goes. Bobby Riggs, Frank Kovacs, and Don Budge think they can name the winner right now. Each has the utmost confidence in his own ability.

Fred Perry, fourth member of the troupe who was sidelined for six stops by an arm injury he received on the opening night, isn't talking, but his racket may speak for him later. Loser of all five starts since his return to action, Perry is in no position to discuss his chances.

As they departed for South Orange, N. J., and tonight's final matches before moving into the midwest, Riggs was leading the field with six victories and three defeats. Kovacs was second on five wins and three losses, with Budge in third place on four and four. Perry has two matches to make up with Budge and Kovacs and one with Riggs.

At the end of the tour, which calls for each man to play 80 matches in five months, the player with the most triumphs will get 36 per cent of the profits. The number two man gets 28 per cent, number three 21 per cent, and number four 15 per cent.

BASEBALL'S HOLDOUT SEASON INAUGURATED

Athletics' Offer To Pitcher McCrabb Bounces Back

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The first contract sent out by the Philadelphia Athletics bounced today as Lester W. McCrabb, a right-handed pitcher, officially inaugurated the 1942 baseball holdout season.

McCrabb, from his home near here, asserted the American league's offer "contained a boost over what I was paid last year, but I didn't think it was enough. I told Mr. Mack I might as well go into defense work, where I could earn more money and he told me to go ahead."

The usually taciturn Connie Mack, A's president-manager, commented only that "I gave him an increase where I should have given him a cut, I guess."

McCrabb, 27, won nine and lost 13 games for the tail-end A's last year Married, he has a 3-A draft classification.

FACES CAZELL HERE TUESDAY

Forecasts Great Boom In Prep Boxing During 1942

NBA Head Says Campaign To Popularize Sport Among High Schools

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another of a series written for the Associated Press by sports leaders on the outlook for 1942.)

By Abe J. Greene

(President, National Boxing Association)

PATTERSON, N. J., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Boxing, like most other sports in the nation, faces the most critical period in its history.

With millions of boys and grown men called into the service; rationing programs circumscribing the food we eat, the clothes we wear, our modes of travel and our hours of illumination dictated by air raid potentialities, sports necessarily take a seat in the band wagon a bit farther back than the front seat.

This being the case, what is to happen?

It is pretty generally agreed that a grim, determined people require diversion and some outlet to "blow off nervous steam" and at the same time maintain the competitive spirit which is so much a part of America. Boxing is and always will be a mainstay. Aside from what it may do for the actual participants, it is the one sport in which at least vicariously the aristocrat of the $30 seat and the fellow in the fifty-cent altitudinous haven can punch the daylight out the fellow they want to see licked.

Dearth of boxing material will be the principal obstacle in the way of the sport's development this year. Most of the potential boxers are in line of conscription and already clubs are hard-pressed to round out complete cards and maintain them intact against the devastation of disappointments and cancellations.

Two fields, therefore, will be open to boxing clubs:

1. The boys in the service, veterans of ring action, or newly developed in the camps.
2. Institution of boxing in high schools throughout the country as a part of school curricula and a potential major boon to health development.

The National Boxing association will institute immediately a campaign in all its member states to have the high schools take up boxing on a mass scale, not so much with the thought of providing ring material, but to set up the basis and fundamental body-building of youth which comes from good training from mitt-handling.

This new year will mark a radical change in the outlook of boxing figures—those who fling mitts, those who manage the fighters, those who promote and those who direct boxing as commission heads.

The day of the big purse—when managers can bicker and bellow for fabulous purses—is over, at least for the duration.

There may be big gates but they won't be for fighters, managers, and promoters.

The year 1942 is no time for tinseled patriots. Nor will boxing permit opportunists to hand out sugar-coated pills dressed in the garb of charity for the good of the nation. If there are to be big gates while the nation is at war, the profits are going to be alloted to the worthwhile, substantial, legitimate service causes, such as Joe Louis-Buddy Baer fight last Friday.

In this way, boxing will justify itself, will prove once again that it has a place in our lives as a manly, productive sport. The National Boxing association is ready to do its part.

SARAZEN PRESENTED KEY BY CONNECTICUT SCRIBES

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Gene Sarazen of Brookfield Center, who started his brilliant golf career in this state, today was selected by the Connecticut Sports Writers' alliance as the recipient of a gold key award to be presented at a dinner here January 26.

Sarazen will come north from his Clearwater, Fla., home to receive the award. The scribes honored Bobby Jones in a similar manner two years ago.

Sabin, Kramer In Net Finals

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Wayne Sabin a former champion from Portland, Ore., and Jack Kramer of Oakland, Calif., will clash here tomorrow afternoon in the finals of the 18th annual Dixie tennis championships.

Sabin battled his way to the title match this afternoon with a straight set victory over Francisco (Pancho) Segura, colorful Ecuadorean player, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

Kramer was extended to four sets before he eliminated Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, 6-4, 0-6, 6-2, 6-3.

After taking the first set, Kramer's game collapsed temporarily while Mulloy blasted his terrific forehand shots for winning points, and the Miamian won the second set without the loss of a game. Kramer recovered in the next set and took command, dropping only five games in the third and fourth sets.

Sabin, who has hit the ball well throughout the tournament, was on top throughout his match, but was forced to play his best to win from Segura.

Pauline Betz, defending champion from Rollins college, meets Doris Hart of Miami, tomorrow for the women's singles title.

MISS. STATE RUNNER WINS ORLEANS RACE

Windham Beats Field Of 16 In Cross-Country Event

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Steve Windham, courageous Mississippi State college cross-country runner, beat a field of 16 opponents to win the 36th annual Jackson day race here today.

The winning time was 43 minutes 1 second, far off the record of 32 minutes 20.7 seconds for the 5.7-mile course which traces the path taken by Major Jean Baptiste Plauche and his Creole fighters when they ran to help Andrew Jackson in the Battle of New Orleans 127 years ago.

Louis deLassus of New Orleans, the only scratch runner, finished a close second and only a strong finish by Windham kept the local boy from winning. As it was, deLassus' actual time was the best in the race as it has been for five straight years.

David Monroe of Tulane was third, and two other Mississippi State runners, Joe Day and Charles Sweeney, finished next in order.

Bean Town Writers Vote Him Outstanding In '41

BOSTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Boston chapel of the Baseball Writers association of America named Pitcher Heber "Dick" Newsome of the Boston Red Red Sox today as Boston's outstanding rookie of the 1941 season.

Newsome will be presented with the chapter's annual award for the outstanding Boston rookie at the Writer's dinner next January 28.

Newsome, 31 years old and a veteran of 10 years in the minors, pitched five-hit ball in his major league debut to escape being shunted back to the sticks. He went on from there to win 19 games, the best victory record compiled by any Red Sox hurler.

PAIR DEADLOCKED FOR FIRST PLACE IN GOLF TOURNEY

Harry Cooper, Ben Hogan Tied With Totals Of 140 In Los Angeles Play

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Hurry-Up Harry Cooper and Ben Hogan took over leadership of the $10,000 Los Angeles open golf tournament late today as yesterday's pace setter, Horton Smith, surrendered to a tough par on the Hillcrest Country club course.

Hogan, a heavy threat for the $3,500 top money, matched his opening round 70 with another brilliant, consistent brand of golf and moved into the lead in mid-afternoon. His 36-hole total of 140 looked safe until Cooper, two-time winner of the event, hurried through the late afternoon shadows and posted a 71 to go with his first round 69 to tie the little Hershey, Pa., pro.

Cooper went for a 12-foot putt on the 18th and barely missed it for what would have been the undisputed lead in this closely contested tournament.

Later, Sammy Snead, Hogan's chief rival in pre-tournament predictions, marched over the hills ahead of a scrambling crowd of 2,000 and wound up with a 70, two strokes under par, for a total 141—one stroke shy of Cooper and Hogan.

Tied at 142 were Smith and Willie Goggin, White Plains, N. Y.

Smith's 68 yesterday was six blows better than he could chalk up today as his woods sang a discord throughout the round.

Low score of the day was turned in by dapper Dick Metz of Oak Park, Ill. He played flawlessly and posted 68 for 144.

One stroke ahead of Metz, Denny Shute, Jim Turnesa, Stan Leonard and George Schneiter was a group that included two of yesterday's sub-par shooters, Herman Barron and Chet Beer, both of whom had 69's in the first round and 74's today. Bracketed with them were Johnnie Revolta, Jimmy Thomson and Vic Ghezzi.

It was a hard day for ex-national open champions. Lawson Little, with 75, dropped to 145, Byron Nelson with 74, had 146, Olin Dutra had 78 for 150 and Ralph Guldahl had 75 for 151.

Defending Champion Johnny Bulla all but went out of top money with a 78 for 152.

SEWANEE SLASHES SPORTS PROGRAM

Discards Major Competition With Other Schools For Duration Of War

SEWANEE, Tenn., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Little Sewanee, already in the throes of football de-emphasis and out of the Southeastern conference, discarded all major intercollegiate athletic competition today for the duration of the war.

Vice-Chancellor Alex Guerry said the action was due not only to the war but also to a desire to "break away from the practice of subsidizing football players and to restore the game of football to an amateur status at some later date."

At the close of the current basketball campaign, only a limited schedule of golf, track and tennis meets will be attempted, he said. Instead, the university will "develop and expand" its intra-mural athletic program and will add military training to its curriculum at the beginning of the second semester.

Sewanee had carded seven football games for next fall, with Washington and Lee, Davidson, Southwestern, Tennessee Polytech, Vanderbilt, the University of Chattanooga and The Citadel.

SUN LOVER CAPTURES PONTALBA HANDICAP

Six-Year-Old Stages Rally In Closing Half Mile

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Sun Lover, six-year-old horse of the Milldale stable, won the $1,500 Pontalba handicap which featured the Fair Grounds card today by coming from an apparently hopeless last in the final half mile.

Thanks to a rousing ride by young Darrel Madden, Sun Lover got up in the closing strides to beat John L. Sullivan's Air Master, the favorite, by half a length in the mile and one-sixteenth contest. The winner paid $9.40 in the $2 mutuels.

John L. Sullivan's Transfigure took the six-furlong sprint feature in 1:11 2-5, a fifth of a second off the track record. Transfigure easily beat Merry Ho stable's Par Avion, with Milldale stable's Happy Home a distant third.

SPORTS SHORTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Ogden Miller, director of Yale athletics, here for the meeting of the eastern intercollegiate football association, said today his school was looking for "the best man" for football coach regardless of previous affiliations.

Yale broke its graduate coach tradition a year ago in selecting Emerson W. (Spike) Nelson of Iowa as its gridiron tutor. Nelson resigned recently to accept a defense job.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Clyde Martin Memorial squash tourney, scheduled for today, has been postponed because the war restriction on rubber caught the clubs without a reserve supply of balls.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Following the lead of two other Dixie conference football schools, Spring Hill college has abandoned football for the duration of the emergency.

The 10-member conference already has lost Mercer university of Macon, Ga., and Howard college of Birmingham. Mercer cancelled all intercollegiate sports, Spring Hill and Howard football only.

CAMP JACKSON, S. C., Jan. 10.—(AP)—For the benefit of soldiers encamped here who might desire to improve their finesse in the art of fishing, several lakes are being heavily stocked with large mouth black bass.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Bill Boelter, Syracuse university's backfield coach, is turning the tables on nature.

Boelter, who works out with the football players, gained weight during the 1941 season but is losing it on the banquet circuit on which he shows motion pictures of Syracuse games.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Jan. 10.—(AP)—With Santa Anita closed, Southern California race fans will find some of their favorites running at Agua Caliente's Sunday-only track.

Such horses as Argonne Woods, former L. B. Mayer handicap performer; Valdina Paul, a Kentucky Derby starter last May; Don Linn II, a Bing Crosby and Lin Howard hopeful, and Kantar Run, co-holder of the Tanforan record for a mile and a sixteenth, are entered in tomorrow's featured seven furlong sprint.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The University of California at Los Angeles basketball team lost its 37th straight to the University of Southern California last night, 59-51. U. C. L. A. has not defeated the Trojans since 1932.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—When Private Dick Weber, Lawrence, Mass., halfback on the 1941 St. Louis university football team, was sent to a west coast army camp, he spent five days looking for a former teammate, Ray Schmisseur, Belleville, Ill.

Then he found Schmisseur, a guard on the 1940 Billiken squad, was living only two buildings from his own quarters.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Freshmen will fill out war-depleted varsity sports squads in the California Collegiate Athletic association, effective with the end of the current basketball campaign.

The conference, composed of leading state-operated colleges, voted first-year eligibility after Stan Williamson, Santa Barbara football coach, disclosed 18 of his 21 varsity lettermen are in military service.

BARNES EXPECTS WAR TO BALANCE LOOP'S STRENGTH

Brownie President Says Other Clubs' Losses To Army To Help St. Louis Nine

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—President Donald L. Barnes expects the war to make a power out of the weak St. Louis Browns by balancing the top-heavy strength of the American league.

Not that it's going to add anything to the ball club but taking such stars as Bobby Feller and Hank Greenberg from the other teams puts them on a playing par with the Browns, Barnes said today.

So far, the draft has claimed only George Archie, substitute infielder, from the Browns' roster, and Outfielder Joe Grace has enlisted in the navy. There's quite a difference between losing them and, say, Ted Williams, who has been classified in 1-A.

Barnes said it was impossible to predict the future of baseball but he felt that sport would have its place in stabilizing the morale of the country and providing relaxation in these tense war days.

With a better balanced league, Barnes believes the Browns will forge into the first division this season. After all, the team finished the 1941 campaign in a tie for sixth, just five games out of fourth place, after a miserable start.

The Browns have been a weakling, at least financially, for a long time. It's no secret the team has lost money in each of the five years of Barnes' administration. There are rumors some directors have refused to kick in any longer and the league has been forced to come to the aid of the Browns.

Despite failure of his five-year plan to produce a pennant contender, Barnes appears to be firmly entrenched in his position as president. A stockholders' meeting is scheduled for January 13 but all indications now point to a routine gathering and a quick adjournment.

GOLF ASSOCIATION CANCELS ALL TOURNEYS

INKS BODY WILL DEVOTE ENERGIES TO WAR PROGRAM

Series Of Meets For Benefit Of Military Forces Planned By Group

By Judson Bailey

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The United States Golf association abandoned all four of its national championships today in order to focus its entire attention on the nation's war effort.

After cancelling its 1942 tournament program, the governing body of golf immediately went into action in behalf of the government, changing the USGA by-laws to permit amateurs to receive up to $100 in defense bonds and stamps as prizes instead of cups and trophies, planning a nation-wide series of club tournaments on holidays, and proposing exhibition matches for war relief and defense.

The sweeping action was the most drastic regimentation for the support of the war any national sports governing body has yet taken.

The 1942 championships cancelled were:

National Open, June 18-20, Interlachen Country club, Minneapolis.

National Public Links, July 27-August 1, Wellshire Municipal Golf course, Denver, Colo.

This action was decided upon by the executive committee yesterday and approved by the association today. Several reasons were advanced for the course, which duplicated the USGA's cancellation of its national tournaments during the last World War.

First was the desire of the officers to give their complete attention to exhibitions and other golf competition for the benefit of war charities.

Joseph C. Dey, Jr., executive secretary of the USGA, pointed out that preparations for and handling of the qualifying tournaments and the big national events ordinarily would have occupied the full forces of the association.

Second was the belief that the competitions themselves would not have been of championship caliber. Military service already has claimed most of the leading amateur golfers—National Champion Bud Ward, Frank Strafaci, Dick Chapman, Tommy Tailer and others—without whom the title competition would not amount to much either in honor or as a spectacle.

Also the absence of the star amateurs would leave the National Open little more than a medal play tournament for professional golfers. Some prominent women golfers were known to be active in civilian defense work and unlikely to compete in a national tournament.

Because of the considerations involved all the national championships were acted upon as a unit, with no effort made to hold one while dropping others.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(Wide World)—A departing spectator looked up at the Madison Square Garden marquee last night and remarked: "Huh, 15 rounds!" . . . A lot of the folks up in the $7 seats didn't get much for their dough, but those close up agreed that Buddy Baer had courage to match his 250-pound body. . . . When he went down the third time his head bounced a couple of inches and blood started to run from his nose. He couldn't get up, but he rolled to the ropes and was hauling himself onto his feet when Referee Frank Fullam counted 10. . . . The first time Louis landed that one-two Buddy seemed to be counting more stars than there were on all the flags hung from the roof—and there must have been a hundred of them. . . . Joe was munching a big red apple when the sports writers reached his dressing room after the fight. He took the apple and Baer with about the same effort.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

Jim Rasmusen, Ironwood (Mich.) Daily Globe: "Joe Louis recently said he was worried about his golf and the war, but not about fighting. Last night he convinced Buddy Baer that he must be worried about the Japanese, too. He took it out on the first 'chap' he could get into the ring."

RINGSIDE RAMBLE

Mike Jacobs didn't waste an inch of space in the Garden that could be sold (the aisles never were narrower), but he wouldn't say the word "sell-out" as long as there was an unsold seat. . . . Earliest arrivals were some British sailors, who were on hand two hours before the first prelim. . . . Someone asked them if they'd rather watch Louis or fight a German submarine. They said "Louis—that will be a real fight." . . . Referee Fullam followed out the patriotic note in his instructions, saying, "We know you boys fight the American way, which is the clean way." . . . There wasn't much ermine in the ringside section but the navy came through with lots of gold braid. Except for such guys as Jim Farley and Joe DiMaggio there weren't many of the "regulars" sitting down front. . . . The gallery boys kept quiet when Wendell Willkie called the champ "Joe Looey" but they really howled when he said "Max Baer."

HEARD ON THE BEACH

First sports scribe: "I hear Man Mountain Dean got back into the army because a general who knew him when he was in before said he was a damn good soldier."

Second ditto: "He ought to be twice as good now—there's twice as much of him."

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

Jimmy Wasdell still is more than a little peeved at Leo Durocher's story that he missed a bunt sign during the world series. Recently he told Cleveland friends, "I thought it was funny at the time, but he told me to go up there and bust one. And he said 'bust'—not 'bunt.'" . . . Jimmy also says one reason for the coolness between the Dodgers and Camilli was that Dolf raised cain with Durocher for blaming Wasdell. . . . The next tennis player to leave the amateurs for the hard cash department likely will be Wayne Sabin. He may enter some of the pro tourneys in Florida this winter. . . . Louis is planning a quick vacation at his Stevensville, Mich., place but he will be back east to see his stablemate, Holman Williams, fight the Cocoa Kid at Baltimore on the 19th.

One of the complaints at the recent football coaches' convention was the lack of new jokes, but Bob Zuppke managed to get a laugh from the boys when he remarked: "In football, the road to glory leads but to the gravy."

CORBY AND LARUE ON MAT PROGRAM AT LOCAL ARENA

Fraley And Cazell Matched In Semi-Final Event Here Tuesday Night

It will be Bob Corby, Atlanta mean man, vs. Jack LaRue of Sioux City in the main event of this week's wrestling card at the Ouachita Valley Fair grounds arena. The semi-final will show Mike Fraley of Omaha, Neb., against Bill Cazell of Amarillo, Tex. A boxing royal of white boys in the 150 to 160-pound class will open the card, which is being sponsored by the Burnett Downes post of the American Legion.

Corby won his bout last week with Jack Curtis of Vicksburg but had his purse held up by the local wrestling commissioner because of the shady methods he employed. Those tactics also caused several women fans to attack the Atlanta lad and made it necessary for him to have police protection when he left the ring after the final fall.

A return match with Curtis will be necessary before Corby can secure his last week's purse and he will have to perform to the satisfaction of the commissioner or forfeit the purse altogether.

But this Jack LaRue doesn't seem to be as easy going as Curtis. While he has never had any but clean scientific bouts here, there have been instances where he indicated that he could and would get plenty rough if the occasion demanded.

Recently LaRue has beaten Sugi Hayamaka, clever 'Frisco grappler, and came very near beating Balk Estes. For a man of his size, the Sioux City grappler is extremely fast and has an excellent assortment of holds which he applies in a very neat manner.

Mike Fraley lost to Whitie Grovo here several weeks ago but showed that he was a good matman, just the same. All fans who saw Grovo perform will agree that no man can put forth his best abilities against such fouls as Grovo employs.

Bill Cazell, who meets Fraley in the semi-final, wrestled here about two years ago. In one semi-final match he wrestled von Bromberg to a draw. In another match he beat Ted Taylor. He uses a mixed style of grappling and doesn't seem to have any preference.

Promoter Gus Kallio said that he hopes in the near future he can have the Monroe American Legion sponsor a wrestling card.

THREE NET STARS EYE FIRST PRIZE

Riggs, Kovacs, Budge Certain They'll Cop Top Place In Tennis Tour

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—If all four of the touring tennis pros don't win first prize in their current barnstorming series, three of them are going to be more disappointed than Alexis Thompson, the wealthy sportsman who backed the cross country outing to the tune of a cool $100,000.

Relaxing here at the fag end of their eastern swing, the members of the top-ranking court quartet agreed that there's nothing wrong with the trip that a few thousand customers couldn't cure.

But that's as far as their agreeing goes. Bobby Riggs, Frank Kovacs, and Don Budge think they can name the winner right now. Each has the utmost confidence in his own ability.

Fred Perry, fourth member of the troupe who was sidelined for six stops by an arm injury he received on the opening night, isn't talking, but his racket may speak for him later. Loser of all five starts since his return to action, Perry is in no position to discuss his chances.

As they departed for South Orange, N. J., and tonight's final matches before moving into the midwest, Riggs was leading the field with six victories and three defeats. Kovacs was second on five wins and three losses, with Budge in third place on four and four. Perry has two matches to make up with Budge and Kovacs and one with Riggs.

At the end of the tour, which calls for each man to play 80 matches in five months, the player with the most triumphs will get 36 per cent of the profits. The number two man gets 28 per cent, number three 21 per cent, and number four 15 per cent.

BASEBALL'S HOLDOUT SEASON INAUGURATED

Athletics' Offer To Pitcher McCrabb Bounces Back

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The first contract sent out by the Philadelphia Athletics bounced today as Lester W. McCrabb, a right-handed pitcher, officially inaugurated the 1942 baseball holdout season.

McCrabb, from his home near here, asserted the American league's offer "contained a boost over what I was paid last year, but I didn't think it was enough. I told Mr. Mack I might as well go into defense work, where I could earn more money and he told me to go ahead."

The usually taciturn Connie Mack, A's president-manager, commented only that "I gave him an increase where I should have given him a cut, I guess."

McCrabb, 27, won nine and lost 13 games for the tail-end A's last year. Married, he has a 3-A draft classification.

FACES CAZELL HERE TUESDAY

Forecasts Great Boom In Prep Boxing During 1942

NBA Head Says Campaign To Popularize Sport Among High Schools

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another of a series written for the Associated Press by sports leaders on the outlook for 1942.)

By Abe J. Greene

(President, National Boxing Association)

PATTERSON, N. J., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Boxing, like most other sports in the nation, faces the most critical period in its history.

With millions of boys and grown men called into the service; rationing programs circumscribing the food we eat, the clothes we wear, our modes of travel and our hours of illumination dictated by air raid potentialities, sports necessarily take a seat in the band wagon a bit farther back than the front seat.

This being the case, what is to happen?

It is pretty generally agreed that a grim, determined people require diversion and some outlet to "blow off nervous steam" and at the same time maintain the competitive spirit which is so much a part of America. Boxing is and always will be a mainstay. Aside from what it may do for the actual participants, it is the one sport in which at least vicariously the aristocrat of the $30 seat and the fellow in the fifty-cent altitudinous haven can punch the daylight out the fellow they want to see licked.

Dearth of boxing material will be the principal obstacle in the way of the sport's development this year. Most of the potential boxers are in line of conscription and already clubs are hard-pressed to round out complete cards and maintain them intact against the devastation of disappointments and cancellations.

Two fields, therefore, will be open to boxing clubs:

1. The boys in the service, veterans of ring action, or newly developed in the camps.

2. Institution of boxing in high schools throughout the country as a part of school curricula and a potential major boon to health development.

The National Boxing association will institute immediately a campaign in all its member states to have the high schools take up boxing on a mass scale, not so much with the thought of providing ring material, but to set up the basis and fundamental body-building of youth which comes from good training from mitt-handling.

This new year will mark a radical change in the outlook of boxing figures—those who fling mitts, those who manage the fighters, those who promote and those who direct boxing as commission heads.

The day of the big purse—when managers can bicker and bellow for fabulous purses—is over, at least for the duration.

There may be big gates but they won't be for fighters, managers, and promoters.

The year 1942 is no time for tinseled patriots. Nor will boxing permit opportunists to hand out sugar-coated pills dressed in the garb of charity for the good of the nation. If there are to be big gates while the nation is at war, the profits are going to be alloted to the worthwhile, substantial, legitimate service causes, such as Joe Louis-Buddy Baer fight last Friday.

In this way, boxing will justify itself, will prove once again that it has a place in our lives as a manly, productive sport. The National Boxing association is ready to do its part.

SARAZEN PRESENTED KEY BY CONNECTICUT SCRIBES

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Gene Sarazen of Brookfield Center, who started his brilliant golf career in this state, today was selected by the Connecticut Sports Writers' alliance as the recipient of a gold key award to be presented at a dinner here January 26.

Sarazen will come north from his Clearwater, Fla., home to receive the award. The scribes honored Bobby Jones in a similar manner two years ago.

Sabin, Kramer In Net Finals

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Wayne Sabin a former champion from Portland, Ore., and Jack Kramer of Oakland, Calif., will clash here tomorrow afternoon in the finals of the 18th annual Dixie tennis championships.

Sabin battled his way to the title match this afternoon with a straight set victory over Francisco (Pancho) Segura, colorful Ecuadorean player, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

Kramer was extended to four sets before he eliminated Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, 6-4, 0-6, 6-2, 6-3.

After taking the first set, Kramer's game collapsed temporarily while Mulloy blasted his terrific forehand shots for winning points, and the Miamian won the second set without the loss of a game. Kramer recovered in the next set and took command, dropping only five games in the third and fourth sets.

Sabin, who has hit the ball well throughout the tournament, was on top throughout his match, but was forced to play his best to win from Segura.

Pauline Betz, defending champion from Rollins college, meets Doris Hart of Miami, tomorrow for the women's singles title.

MISS. STATE RUNNER WINS ORLEANS RACE

Windham Beats Field Of 16 In Cross-Country Event

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Steve Windham, courageous Mississippi State college cross-country runner, beat a field of 16 opponents to win the 36th annual Jackson day race here today.

The winning time was 43 minutes 1 second, far off the record of 32 minutes 20.7 seconds for the 5.7-mile course which traces the path taken by Major Jean Baptiste Plauche and his Creole fighters when they ran to help Andrew Jackson in the Battle of New Orleans 127 years ago.

Louis deLassus of New Orleans, the only scratch runner, finished a close second and only a strong finish by Windham kept the local boy from winning. As it was, deLassus' actual time was the best in the race as it has been for five straight years.

David Monroe of Tulane was third, and two other Mississippi State runners, Joe Day and Charles Sweeney, finished next in order.

Bean Town Writers Vote Him Outstanding In '41

BOSTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Boston chapel of the Baseball Writers association of America named Pitcher Heber "Dick" Newsome of the Boston Red Red Sox today as Boston's outstanding rookie of the 1941 season.

Newsome will be presented with the chapter's annual award for the outstanding Boston rookie at the Writer's dinner next January 28.

Newsome, 31 years old and a veteran of 10 years in the minors, pitched five-hit ball in his major league debut to escape being shunted back to the sticks. He went on from there to win 19 games, the best victory record compiled by any Red Sox hurler.

PAIR DEADLOCKED FOR FIRST PLACE IN GOLF TOURNEY

Harry Cooper, Ben Hogan Tied With Totals Of 140 In Los Angeles Play

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Hurry-Up Harry Cooper and Ben Hogan took over leadership of the $10,000 Los Angeles open golf tournament late today as yesterday's pace setter, Horton Smith, surrendered to a tough par on the Hillcrest Country club course.

Hogan, a heavy threat for the $3,500 top money, matched his opening round 70 with another brilliant, consistent brand of golf and moved into the lead in mid-afternoon. His 36-hole total of 140 looked safe until Cooper, two-time winner of the event, hurried through the late afternoon shadows and posted a 71 to go with his first round 69 to tie the little Hershey, Pa., pro.

Cooper went for a 12-foot putt on the 18th and barely missed it for what would have been the undisputed lead in this closely contested tournament.

Later, Sammy Snead, Hogan's chief rival in pre-tournament predictions, marched over the hills ahead of a scrambling crowd of 2,000 and wound up with a 70, two strokes under par, for a total 141—one stroke shy of Cooper and Hogan.

Tied at 142 were Smith and Willie Goggin, White Plains, N. Y.

Smith's 68 yesterday was six blows better than he could chalk up today as his woods sang a discord throughout the round.

Low score of the day was turned in by dapper Dick Metz of Oak Park, Ill. He played flawlessly and posted 68 for 144.

One stroke ahead of Metz, Denny Shute, Jim Turnesa, Stan Leonard and George Schneiter was a group that included two of yesterday's sub-par shooters, Herman Barron and Chet Beer, both of whom had 69's in the first round and 74's today. Bracketed with them were Johnnie Revolta, Jimmy Thomson and Vic Ghezzi.

It was a hard day for ex-national open champions. Lawson Little, with 75, dropped to 145, Byron Nelson with 74, had 146, Olin Dutra had 78 for 150 and Ralph Guldahl had 75 for 151.

Defending Champion Johnny Bulla all but went out of top money with a 78 for 152.

SEWANEE SLASHES SPORTS PROGRAM

Discards Major Competition With Other Schools For Duration Of War

SEWANEE, Tenn., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Little Sewanee, already in the throes of football de-emphasis and out of the Southeastern conference, discarded all major intercollegiate athletic competition today for the duration of the war.

Vice-Chancellor Alex Guerry said the action was due not only to the war but also to a desire to "break away from the practice of subsidizing football players and to restore the game of football to an amateur status at some later date."

At the close of the current basketball campaign, only a limited schedule of golf, track and tennis meets will be attempted, he said. Instead, the university will "develop and expand" its intra-mural athletic program and will add military training to its curriculum at the beginning of the second semester.

Sewanee had carded seven football games for next fall, with Washington and Lee, Davidson, Southwestern, Tennessee Polytech, Vanderbilt, the University of Chattanooga and The Citadel.

SUN LOVER CAPTURES PONTALBA HANDICAP

Six-Year-Old Stages Rally In Closing Half Mile

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Sun Lover, six-year-old horse of the Milldale stable, won the $1,500 Pontalba handicap which featured the Fair Grounds card today by coming from an apparently hopeless last in the final half mile.

Thanks to a rousing ride by young Darrel Madden, Sun Lover got up in the closing strides to beat John L. Sullivan's Air Master, the favorite, by half a length in the mile and one-sixteenth contest. The winner paid $9.40 in the $2 mutuels.

John L. Sullivan's Transfigure took the six-furlong sprint feature in 1:11 2-5, a fifth of a second off the track record. Transfigure easily beat Merry Ho stable's Par Avion, with Milldale stable's Happy Home a distant third.

SPORTS SHORTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Ogden Miller, director of Yale athletics, here for the meeting of the eastern intercollegiate football association, said today his school was looking for "the best man" for football coach regardless of previous affiliations.

Yale broke its graduate coach tradition a year ago in selecting Emerson W. (Spike) Nelson of Iowa as its gridiron tutor. Nelson resigned recently to accept a defense job.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Clyde Martin Memorial squash tourney, scheduled for today, has been postponed because the war restriction on rubber caught the clubs without a reserve supply of balls.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Following the lead of two other Dixie conference football schools, Spring Hill college has abandoned football for the duration of the emergency.

The 10-member conference already has lost Mercer university of Macon, Ga., and Howard college of Birmingham. Mercer cancelled all intercollegiate sports, Spring Hill and Howard football only.

CAMP JACKSON, S. C., Jan. 10.—(AP)—For the benefit of soldiers encamped here who might desire to improve their finesse in the art of fishing, several lakes are being heavily stocked with large mouth black bass.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Bill Boelter, Syracuse university's backfield coach, is turning the tables on nature.

Boelter, who works out with the football players, gained weight during the 1941 season but is losing it on the banquet circuit on which he shows motion pictures of Syracuse games.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Jan. 10.—(AP)—With Santa Anita closed, Southern California race fans will find some of their favorites running at Agua Caliente's Sunday-only track.

Such horses as Argonne Woods, former L. B. Mayer handicap performer; Valdina Paul, a Kentucky Derby starter last May; Don Linn II, a Bing Crosby and Lin Howard hopeful, and Kantar Run, co-holder of the Tanforan record for a mile and a sixteenth, are entered in tomorrow's featured seven furlong sprint.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The University of California at Los Angeles basketball team lost its 37th straight to the University of Southern California last night, 59-51. U. C. L. A. has not defeated the Trojans since 1932.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—When Private Dick Weber, Lawrence, Mass., halfback on the 1941 St. Louis university football team, was sent to a west coast army camp, he spent five days looking for a former teammate, Ray Schmisseur, Belleville, Ill.

Then he found Schmisseur, a guard on the 1940 Billiken squad, was living only two buildings from his own quarters.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Freshmen will fill out war-depleted varsity sports squads in the California Collegiate Athletic association, effective with the end of the current basketball campaign.

The conference, composed of leading state-operated colleges, voted first-year eligibility after Stan Williamson, Santa Barbara football coach, disclosed 18 of his 21 varsity lettermen are in military service.

BARNES EXPECTS WAR TO BALANCE LOOP'S STRENGTH

Brownie President Says Other Clubs' Losses To Army To Help St. Louis Nine

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—President Donald L. Barnes expects the war to make a power out of the weak St. Louis Browns by balancing the top-heavy strength of the American league.

Not that it's going to add anything to the ball club but taking such stars as Bobby Feller and Hank Greenberg from the other teams puts them on a playing par with the Browns, Barnes said today.

So far, the draft has claimed only George Archie, substitute infielder, from the Browns' roster, and Outfielder Joe Grace has enlisted in the navy. There's quite a difference between losing them and, say, Ted Williams, who has been classified in 1-A.

Barnes said it was impossible to predict the future of baseball but he felt that sport would have its place in stabilizing the morale of the country and providing relaxation in these tense war days.

With a better balanced league, Barnes believes the Browns will forge into the first division this season. After all, the team finished the 1941 campaign in a tie for sixth, just five games out of fourth place, after a miserable start.

The Browns have been a weakling, at least financially, for a long time. It's no secret the team has lost money in each of the five years of Barnes' administration. There are rumors some directors have refused to kick in any longer and the league has been forced to come to the aid of the Browns.

Despite failure of his five-year plan to produce a pennant contender, Barnes appears to be firmly entrenched in his position as president. A stockholders' meeting is scheduled for January 13 but all indications now point to a routine gathering and a quick adjournment.

WAR TAKES QUICK TOLL OF SPORTS EVENTS IN SOUTH

Several Already Cancelled; Horse Racing Thus Far Is Unaffected

ATLANTA, Jan. 10.—(AP)—War took swift toll of southern sports events today and threatened cancellations of others.

At Miami, the eighth annual Miami-Nassau yacht race was called off, Chairman Robert Collins of the race executive committee explaining war conditions made it impractical to hold the contest. Earlier in the week the Sir Thomas Lipton sailing regatta at Miami Beach was suspended, and there was speculation that the annual St. Petersburg-Havana yacht race likewise would become a war casualty.

At Dallas, Tex., Mrs. Dan Chandler, president of the Southern Women's Golf association, said she saw little possibility of holding the 1942 tournament, scheduled to start May 11 at Sea Island, Ga. Her comment came after the United States Golf association announced it had cancelled the national open tournament, the national amateur, and the national public links tournament because of the war.

There was no indication whether the trend would be followed in collegiate golf. The annual southern intercollegiate invitation tournament is scheduled at Athens, Ga., in April, simultaneous with the Southeastern conference golf tournament. The Southern conference meet is held independently.

Collegiate football continued to fall by the wayside. The University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., which resigned last year from the Southeastern conference, announced withdrawal from major intercollegiate competition after the basketball season, and notified all prospective grid opponents of cancellation. Limited schedules in golf, track and tennis are to be continued, President Alexander Guerry said, but no other sport.

Springhill college at Mobile, Ala., announced last night it would abandon football for the duration, joining Howard college of Birmingham, Erskine and Mercer university which previously made the same move. Mercer withdrew from all intercollegiate competition.

Only major sporting activity thus far unaffected in the south was horse racing. At Miami the first group of California "refugee" horses arrived for Hialeah Park's forthcoming meeting. Among the racers were W. L. Brann's Challedon and Pictor.

MAROON SOPHS HAND BENGALS CAGE LOSS

Bitterly-Fought Tilt Won By Miss. State, 43-41

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Mississippi State's sophomore cagers handed Louisiana State a 43-41 defeat here tonight in a bitterly-fought Southeastern conference game.

Leading 23-22, at the half, the Maroons dropped behind when Bass, Tiger center, hit a long one, but they fought back into the lead on goals by Lloyd McDougal and Carlene Solomon, sophomores, and were able to outlast the favored Tiger team.

It was a pair of goals by McDougal and Solomon's basket that won for State in the final two minutes of play after the lead had changed hands seven times in the last half.

Louisiana State took a 6-0 lead in the first minute on goals by Morey, Chaney, and Bass, but Captain Eustace Conway made three long ones for State to tie the score and the Maroons pulled away to an 18-10 lead.

John Chaney, Tiger center, led the scorers with 17 points.

SCHOOL SLATED

ATHENS, Tex., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The world's largest coaching school will be held at Abilene August 3 to 8 but its head instructors will not be known before the end of the week. Abilene was selected as the site of the tenth annual high school clinic in spirited bidding among five cities here today at the meeting of the Texas High School Coaches association board of directors.

Ouachita Five Loses In Meet

MINDEN, La., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Surviving a heavy entry list, Byrd High of Shreveport defeated tonight the Haughton quintet, 38-26 in the finals to win the annual Minden High school invitational basketball tourney.

After drawing an opening round bye, the Byrdmen turned back Sarepta, 18-14 in the quarter-finals and then soundly walloped Harris, 46-15 in a tune-up for the finals.

Haughton advanced to the finals after bowling over Evergreen, Minden and Ouachita Parish High.

JOE LOUIS TO JOIN ARMY WEDNESDAY

Probably Will Fight Next For Military Benefit Fund Late In March

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Less than 24 hours after doing a pretty fair fighting job for the navy, Joe Louis completed arrangements today to join Uncle Sam's army next Wednesday and do his battling in khaki from here on.

The Brown Bomber, who reached a peak in his blasting career for the second time last night in felling Buddy Baer in two minutes and 56 seconds, will be given his final physical examination Monday, will be inducted in the service Wednesday at Camp Upton, Long Island, and probably will make his next fist-tossing start in late March for an army fund.

This one will be against one of a list of prospective opponents Promoter Mike Jacobs has drawn up, headed by Bob Pastor, who fought Joe twice and who was rated by boxing writers as the top fistic comeback for 1941. If Pastor can whip Lem Franklin in Cleveland late this month, he probably will get the shot. Otherwise it may be Gus Lesnevich, the rugged light-heavyweight champion, if he tops Lou Nova February 6; southpaw Melio Bettina, ex-175-pound boss, or ample Abe Simon, who went 13 rounds with Joe a year ago.

Joe turned up at army draft board headquarters to straighten out all the advance details that will make him Private Joe Louis Barrow even before he stopped at Jacobs' office to settle up for last night's fight. Not that he had anything to collect out of the gross gate of $189,700.55 contributed by the 18,870 fans who saw him become the vicious executioner. He was once more the fierce flailer of the second Max Schmeling fight, and the oldest inhabitants of cauliflower alley couldn't remember when any fighter hit such heights twice in his career.

This time Joe disregaded all principles of the fighters' union by putting his title on the line and his dynamite on display for nothing. He and Promoter Mike Jacobs turned all their revenue from the show over to the navy relief fund. Baer contributed a chunk of his. Every preliminary fighter on the card also chipped in with various sums and the officials worked for half price. For all the job he had to do last night, Referee Frankie Fullam was lucky he wasn't on a piecework contract. His chief task was to count to ten when Buddy went down the third time. As a result of all the donations, the navy fund picked up a check within shouting distance of the six-figure mark.

Joe settled up the army business with the same simple gesture with which he did the job for the navy relief fund last night. Without informing anyone but his co-managers and Jacobs, he arrived at the offices of local draft board No. 20, asked for a transfer of examination and induction from Chicago, where he registered, and then voluntarily waived all rights to any notices or delays in order to get it settled as soon as possible.

"I was goin' in anyway," he explained simply, "so I figured I might as well get it all done at once right now. I dunno what they're gonna do with me, but it don't make much difference."

Although army officials refused comment on their plans for Joe, Colonel H. Clay Supplee, morale officer for the Second corps area, indicated clearly that Joe would be placed in the morale service, where he is likely to do the army most good.

Tribe Cagers To Play 3 Contests Here This Week

Harrisonburg Five And East Central Mississippi On Locals' Schedule

Three battles are on tap for the Northeast Junior college basketball team this week and then the Tribesmen will retreat to the class rooms for mid-term examinations before returning to the cage wars on January 30.

The Harrisonburg Athletic club's quintet, composed of former college stars now campaigning in the Amateur Athletic union will be here tomorrow night for a game scheduled to get under way at 8 o'clock.

The East Central Mississippi Junior college basketeers will be here for games Wednesday and Thursday nights in the junior college gymnasium.

Coach James L. Malone last night said he had no information concerning the strength of the Harrisonburg team but figured the invaders would present one of the classiest independent teams in this section of the state.

Coach Walter Sullivan's East Central cagers of Decatur, Miss., have played only two games this season, both before Christmas. They defeated Ellisville Junior college on both occasions, 54 to 37 and 51 to 39.

The three games will conclude basketball activity here until January 30 when the Hinds, Miss., Junior college comes here seeking revenge for the 43 to 42 defeat suffered at the hands of the Tribesmen in December.

Yesterday Coach Malone put the Redskins through a short workout and announced all players were in good shape with the exception of Clem Welsh, center. Welsh suffered a sprained ankle during the holidays, missed Friday night's game with Sunflower Junior college and will probable miss the battles this week.

Howard Williams, guard, who was missing from practice all last week, returned from home in Penn, Pa., where he spent the holidays, in time to see action against Sunflower.

Arkansas Teachers Nip Tech Rallies To Take Cage Contest, 35-29

RUSTON, La., Jan. 10.—(Special)—Through combination of skillful offense and defense, the Arkansas State Teachers of Conway defeated the Louisiana Tech basketball players at Ruston Saturday night, 35-29.

The Arkansans led at the half, 13-9.

While the Techsters knotted the count twice in the second, 15-15, and 19-19, the Conway quintet readily regained the lead and had little trouble in holding it.

J. H. Laughlin, the Tech captain and forward, was high-point man, with nine points on four field goals and one shot from the gratis line.

Louisiana college of Pineville is booked to meet the Techmen here Wednesday night.

BERNICE, La., Jan. 10.—(Special)—The Bernice and Lisbon High school cage teams got together in the only Tri-Parish league games of the week at Lisbon with the teams dividing honors. The Bernice boys whipped the Lisbon quintet, 15 to 13, but the Lisbon girls, leaders in their division, trounced the Bernice sextet, 17 to 12.

Scoring honors were about evenly divided among the Bernice and Lisbon players in the boys' game which was featured by close guarding that kept the score on both sides at a minimum. Coplen, Gray and Williams turned in good performances for the Bernice quintet while Meadows played best for Lisbon.

The Lisbon girls, tied only by Junction City and undefeated this year, followed the lead of Harper, sharpshooting forward, to beat the Bernice girls. Harper was high scorer of the game with eight points. Cook led the Bernice scoring with six points. Kilgore and Sawyers played excellent defensive games for the winners while McCuller and Barham stood out defensively for Bernice.

GATORS WIN

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Sophomore Eddie Hausenbauer's free throw with 45 seconds to play gave the scrappy University of Florida Gators a hair-raising 29-28 triumph over the University of Georgia tonight and an even break in their Southeastern conference basketball series.

Here's Latest In Sports Etiquette For Blackout

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Here's the latest in sports etiquette—what to do in case a blackout interrupts a basketball game.

The prep league here has decided that if the blackout occurs in the fourth period the game will be called after 15 minutes of waiting and the leading team will be declared the winner. If the game hasn't reached the fourth period, then it will have to be played over.

All-American Amateur Golf Tournament To Be Held In Chicago

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—(AP)—A new amateur fairways event was entered in the 1942 sports calendar today—the all-American amateur golf championship to be sponsored next September by the Tam O'Shanter club in conjunction with its $15,000 open tournament.

George S. May, Tam O'Shanter president, said that in view of today's cancellation of the 1942 amateur event of the U. S. G. A., his club will sponsor an amateur championship in which competitors will also be competing in the rich Tam O'Shanter open program.

Proceeds from both events, to be played September 7-13, will go to the army relief fund, May said.

For the amateur event, qualifying will be held September 8, to be followed by a match play program winding up with semi-finals Friday, and the final Saturday. The Tam open, in which first money may be as much as $3,000, will be played Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Numerous prizes of $100 defense bonds will be distributed to the amateurs, May said.

May had invited the United States Golf association to transfer its 1942 amateur championship from California's Pebble Beach course to Tam O'Shanter. Today, the U. S. G. A. cancelled all its 1942 major events, including the open, women's championship and public links program.

May directed the 1941 Tam O'Shanter open which drew between 35,000 to 40,000 fans to break golf attendance records.

EFFORTS BEING RENEWED TO BRING FARR TO U. S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Efforts are being renewed to bring Tommy Farr, British empire heavyweight champion, to the United States for a series of bouts.

Thomas P. Morgan, Jr., co-chairman of the British War Relief society of Washington, said today that attempts were being made to clear away complications which prevented Farr from leaving England for an appearance in this country last summer. At that time the proposal was that he meet Bill Conn.

The present hopes of the promoters, Morgan said, was to put on a big boxing show at Washington next June, with Farr in the main bout.

MINOR LOOPS LOSE 607 PLAYERS IN 15 MONTHS

DURHAM, N. C., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Baseball's minor leagues lost a net total of 607 players from October 1, 1940 to December 30, 1941, President W. G. Bramham of the minors announced today.

The total represents an average of about two players a club. About half the number have gone into the armed forces and the others were lost by voluntary retirement and ineligibility.

The grand total of inactives for the period was 745, but the figure was reduced by the reinstatement of 138 players from the various lists.

CARDS HAVE TRAINING SCHEDULE OF 35 TILTS

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Picking only major league opponents, the St. Louis Cardinals announced today a spring training schedule of 35 games, including nine against the World Champion New York Yankees and nine against the Detroit Tigers.

Pitchers and catchers will report at the St. Petersburg, Fla., camp February 23 and the other players will check in four days later. The squad will remain in Florida a week later than usual, starting its trek north April 6.

Tests have shown that about 7 per cent of motor vehicles in motion contain enough carbon monoxide to cause occupants to collapse.

New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Cotton futures made sizable gains today, spurred by senate approval of giving Secretary Wickard veto powers on farm price ceilings and by demands for an increase in the parity price.

Active buying and covering by trade and speculative sources encountered heavy hedge selling. Buyers were unwilling to follow the advance too far until more is known about the government selling program.

Futures closed 20 cents a bale lower to 45 cents higher.

RADIO SUIT FILED

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Mutual Broadcasting system and six affiliated stations filed a $10,275,000 damage suit in federal court today, charging the Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting company with illegally restricting the transmission of MBS nationwide network programs. Brought under the Sherman anti-trust act, the suit sought three times the amount of the $3,425,000 damages actually claimed. Challenged specifically was the validity of contracts between NBC's Blue network and affiliated stations in cities having less than four stations of comparable facilities.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—War and tax clouds dampened recovery efforts in today's stock market and leading issues dipped fractions to a point or so.

The list looked as though it might put on a feeble rally in early dealings but bidders soon began to fade. While a few favorites managed to contest the shift with modest improvement, losers were well in the majority at the close.

Negative encouragement was derived from the fact volume inclined to dwindle on the downward drift. Transfers for the two hours were around 350,000 shares, one of the smallest turnovers for a Saturday since last November.

Bonds were mixed. Commodities advanced following the victory of the farm bloc in the senate on provisions of the price control law now being formulated.

WAR TAKES QUICK TOLL OF SPORTS EVENTS IN SOUTH

Several Already Cancelled; Horse Racing Thus Far Is Unaffected

ATLANTA, Jan. 10.—(AP)—War took swift toll of southern sports events today and threatened cancellations of others.

At Miami, the eighth annual Miami-Nassau yacht race was called off, Chairman Robert Collins of the race executive committee explaining war conditions made it impractical to hold the contest. Earlier in the week the Sir Thomas Lipton sailing regatta at Miami Beach was suspended, and there was speculation that the annual St. Petersburg-Havana yacht race likewise would become a war casualty.

At Dallas, Tex., Mrs. Dan Chandler, president of the Southern Women's Golf association, said she saw little possibility of holding the 1942 tournament, scheduled to start May 11 at Sea Island, Ga. Her comment came after the United States Golf association announced it had cancelled the national open tournament, the national amateur, and the national public links tournament because of the war.

There was no indication whether the trend would be followed in collegiate golf. The annual southern intercollegiate invitation tournament is scheduled at Athens, Ga., in April, simultaneous with the Southeastern conference golf tournament. The Southern conference meet is held independently.

Collegiate football continued to fall by the wayside. The University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., which resigned last year from the Southeastern conference, announced withdrawal from major intercollegiate competition after the basketball season, and notified all prospective grid opponents of cancellation. Limited schedules in golf, track and tennis are to be continued, President Alexander Guerry said, but no other sport.

Springhill college at Mobile, Ala., announced last night it would abandon football for the duration, joining Howard college of Birmingham, Erskine and Mercer university which previously made the same move. Mercer withdrew from all intercollegiate competition.

Only major sporting activity thus far unaffected in the south was horse racing. At Miami the first group of California "refugee" horses arrived for Hialeah Park's forthcoming meeting. Among the racers were W. L. Brann's Challedon and Pictor.

MAROON SOPHS HAND BENGALS CAGE LOSS

Bitterly-Fought Tilt Won By Miss. State, 43-41

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Mississippi State's sophomore cagers handed Louisiana State a 43-41 defeat here tonight in a bitterly-fought Southeastern conference game.

Leading 23-22, at the half, the Maroons dropped behind when Bass, Tiger center, hit a long one, but they fought back into the lead on goals by Lloyd McDougal and Carlene Solomon, sophomores, and were able to outlast the favored Tiger team.

It was a pair of goals by McDougal and Solomon's basket that won for State in the final two minutes of play after the lead had changed hands seven times in the last half.

Louisiana State took a 6-0 lead in the first minute on goals by Morey, Chaney, and Bass, but Captain Eustace Conway made three long ones for State to tie the score and the Maroons pulled away to an 18-10 lead.

John Chaney, Tiger center, led the scorers with 17 points.

SCHOOL SLATED

ATHENS, Tex., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The world's largest coaching school will be held at Abilene August 3 to 8 but its head instructors will not be known before the end of the week. Abilene was selected as the site of the tenth annual high school clinic in spirited bidding among five cities here today at the meeting of the Texas High School Coaches association board of directors.

Ouachita Five Loses In Meet

MINDEN, La., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Surviving a heavy entry list, Byrd High of Shreveport defeated tonight the Haughton quintet, 38-26 in the finals to win the annual Minden High school invitational basketball tourney.

After drawing an opening round bye, the Byrdmen turned back Sarepta, 18-14 in the quarter-finals and then soundly walloped Harris, 46-15 in a tune-up for the finals.

Haughton advanced to the finals after bowling over Evergreen, Minden and Ouachita Parish High.

JOE LOUIS TO JOIN ARMY WEDNESDAY

Probably Will Fight Next For Military Benefit Fund Late In March

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Less than 24 hours after doing a pretty fair fighting job for the navy, Joe Louis completed arrangements today to join Uncle Sam's army next Wednesday and do his battling in khaki from here on.

The Brown Bomber, who reached a peak in his blasting career for the second time last night in felling Buddy Baer in two minutes and 56 seconds, will be given his final physical examination Monday, will be inducted in the service Wednesday at Camp Upton, Long Island, and probably will make his next fist-tossing start in late March for an army fund.

This one will be against one of a list of prospective opponents Promoter Mike Jacobs has drawn up, headed by Bob Pastor, who fought Joe twice and who was rated by boxing writers as the top fistic comeback for 1941. If Pastor can whip Lem Franklin in Cleveland late this month, he probably will get the shot. Otherwise it may be Gus Lesnevich, the rugged light-heavyweight champion, if he tops Lou Nova February 6; southpaw Melio Bettina, ex-175-pound boss, or ample Abe Simon, who went 13 rounds with Joe a year ago.

Joe turned up at army draft board headquarters to straighten out all the advance details that will make him Private Joe Louis Barrow even before he stopped at Jacobs' office to settle up for last night's fight. Not that he had anything to collect out of the gross gate of $189,700.55 contributed by the 18,870 fans who saw him become the vicious executioner. He was once more the fierce flailer of the second Max Schmeling fight, and the oldest inhabitants of cauliflower alley couldn't remember when any fighter hit such heights twice in his career.

This time Joe disregaded all principles of the fighters' union by putting his title on the line and his dynamite on display for nothing. He and Promoter Mike Jacobs turned all their revenue from the show over to the navy relief fund. Baer contributed a chunk of his. Every preliminary fighter on the card also chipped in with various sums and the officials worked for half price. For all the job he had to do last night, Referee Frankie Fullam was lucky he wasn't on a piecework contract. His chief task was to count to ten when Buddy went down the third time. As a result of all the donations, the navy fund picked up a check within shouting distance of the six-figure mark.

Joe settled up the army business with the same simple gesture with which he did the job for the navy relief fund last night. Without informing anyone but his co-managers and Jacobs, he arrived at the offices of local draft board No. 20, asked for a transfer of examination and induction from Chicago, where he registered, and then voluntarily waived all rights to any notices or delays in order to get it settled as soon as possible.

"I was goin' in anyway," he explained simply, "so I figured I might as well get it all done at once right now. I dunno what they're gonna do with me, but it don't make much difference."

Although army officials refused comment on their plans for Joe, Colonel H. Clay Supplee, morale officer for the Second corps area, indicated clearly that Joe would be placed in the morale service, where he is likely to do the army most good.

Tribe Cagers To Play 3 Contests Here This Week

Harrisonburg Five And East Central Mississippi On Locals' Schedule

Three battles are on tap for the Northeast Junior college basketball team this week and then the Tribesmen will retreat to the class rooms for mid-term examinations before returning to the cage wars on January 30.

The Harrisonburg Athletic club's quintet, composed of former college stars now campaigning in the Amateur Athletic union will be here tomorrow night for a game scheduled to get under way at 8 o'clock.

The East Central Mississippi Junior college basketeers will be here for games Wednesday and Thursday nights in the junior college gymnasium.

Coach James L. Malone last night said he had no information concerning the strength of the Harrisonburg team but figured the invaders would present one of the classiest independent teams in this section of the state.

Coach Walter Sullivan's East Central cagers of Decatur, Miss., have played only two games this season, both before Christmas. They defeated Ellisville Junior college on both occasions, 54 to 37 and 51 to 39.

The three games will conclude basketball activity here until January 30 when the Hinds, Miss., Junior college comes here seeking revenge for the 43 to 42 defeat suffered at the hands of the Tribesmen in December.

Yesterday Coach Malone put the Redskins through a short workout and announced all players were in good shape with the exception of Clem Welsh, center. Welsh suffered a sprained ankle during the holidays, missed Friday night's game with Sunflower Junior college and will probable miss the battles this week.

Howard Williams, guard, who was missing from practice all last week, returned from home in Penn, Pa., where he spent the holidays, in time to see action against Sunflower.

Arkansas Teachers Nip Tech Rallies To Take Cage Contest, 35-29

RUSTON, La., Jan. 10.—(Special)—Through combination of skillful offense and defense, the Arkansas State Teachers of Conway defeated the Louisiana Tech basketball players at Ruston Saturday night, 35-29.

The Arkansans led at the half, 13-9.

While the Techsters knotted the count twice in the second, 15-15, and 19-19, the Conway quintet readily regained the lead and had little trouble in holding it.

J. H. Laughlin, the Tech captain and forward, was high-point man, with nine points on four field goals and one shot from the gratis line.

Louisiana college of Pineville is booked to meet the Techmen here Wednesday night.

BERNICE, La., Jan. 10.—(Special)—The Bernice and Lisbon High school cage teams got together in the only Tri-Parish league games of the week at Lisbon with the teams dividing honors. The Bernice boys whipped the Lisbon quintet, 15 to 13, but the Lisbon girls, leaders in their division, trounced the Bernice sextet, 17 to 12.

Scoring honors were about evenly divided among the Bernice and Lisbon players in the boys' game which was featured by close guarding that kept the score on both sides at a minimum. Coplen, Gray and Williams turned in good performances for the Bernice quintet while Meadows played best for Lisbon.

The Lisbon girls, tied only by Junction City and undefeated this year, followed the lead of Harper, sharpshooting forward, to beat the Bernice girls. Harper was high scorer of the game with eight points. Cook led the Bernice scoring with six points. Kilgore and Sawyers played excellent defensive games for the winners while McCuller and Barham stood out defensively for Bernice.

GATORS WIN

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Sophomore Eddie Hausenbauer's free throw with 45 seconds to play gave the scrappy University of Florida Gators a hair-raising 29-28 triumph over the University of Georgia tonight and an even break in their Southeastern conference basketball series.

Here's Latest In Sports Etiquette For Blackout

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Here's the latest in sports etiquette—what to do in case a blackout interrupts a basketball game.

The prep league here has decided that if the blackout occurs in the fourth period the game will be called after 15 minutes of waiting and the leading team will be declared the winner. If the game hasn't reached the fourth period, then it will have to be played over.

NEW LINKS MEET PUT ON CALENDAR

All-American Amateur Golf Tournament To Be Held In Chicago

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—(AP)—A new amateur fairways event was entered in the 1942 sports calendar today—the all-American amateur golf championship to be sponsored next September by the Tam O'Shanter club in conjunction with its $15,000 open tournament.

George S. May, Tam O'Shanter president, said that in view of today's cancellation of the 1942 amateur event of the U. S. G. A., his club will sponsor an amateur championship in which competitors will also be competing in the rich Tam O'Shanter open program.

Proceeds from both events, to be played September 7-13, will go to the army relief fund, May said.

For the amateur event, qualifying will be held September 8, to be followed by a match play program winding up with semi-finals Friday, and the final Saturday. The Tam open, in which first money may be as much as $3,000, will be played Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Numerous prizes of $100 defense bonds will be distributed to the amateurs, May said.

May had invited the United States Golf association to transfer its 1942 amateur championship from California's Pebble Beach course to Tam O'Shanter. Today, the U. S. G. A. cancelled all its 1942 major events, including the open, women's championship and public links program.

May directed the 1941 Tam O'Shanter open which drew between 35,000 to 40,000 fans to break golf attendance records.

EFFORTS BEING RENEWED TO BRING FARR TO U. S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Efforts are being renewed to bring Tommy Farr, British empire heavyweight champion, to the United States for a series of bouts.

Thomas P. Morgan, Jr., co-chairman of the British War Relief society of Washington, said today that attempts were being made to clear away complications which prevented Farr from leaving England for an appearance in this country last summer. At that time the proposal was that he meet Bill Conn.

The present hopes of the promoters, Morgan said, was to put on a big boxing show at Washington next June, with Farr in the main bout.

MINOR LOOPS LOSE 607 PLAYERS IN 15 MONTHS

DURHAM, N. C., Jan. 10.—(AP)—Baseball's minor leagues lost a net total of 607 players from October 1, 1940 to December 30, 1941, President W. G. Bramham of the minors announced today.

The total represents an average of about two players a club. About half the number have gone into the armed forces and the others were lost by voluntary retirement and ineligibility.

The grand total of inactives for the period was 745, but the figure was reduced by the reinstatement of 138 players from the various lists.

CARDS HAVE TRAINING SCHEDULE OF 35 TILTS

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Picking only major league opponents, the St. Louis Cardinals announced today a spring training schedule of 35 games, including nine against the World Champion New York Yankees and nine against the Detroit Tigers.

Pitchers and catchers will report at the St. Petersburg, Fla., camp February 23 and the other players will check in four days later. The squad will remain in Florida a week later than usual, starting its trek north April 6.

Tests have shown that about 7 per cent of motor vehicles in motion contain enough carbon monoxide to cause occupants to collapse.

New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—Cotton futures made sizable gains today, spurred by senate approval of giving Secretary Wickard veto powers on farm price ceilings and by demands for an increase in the parity price.

Active buying and covering by trade and speculative sources encountered heavy hedge selling. Buyers were unwilling to follow the advance too far until more is known about the government selling program.

Week-end liquidation and profit taking concentrated in the closing limits of trading pared gains sharply and at the finish prices were at the lowest levels of the session.

Futures closed 20 cents a bale lower to 45 cents higher.

RADIO SUIT FILED

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Mutual Broadcasting system and six affiliated stations filed a $10,275,000 damage suit in federal court today, charging the Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting company with illegally restricting the transmission of MBS nationwide network programs. Brought under the Sherman anti-trust act, the suit sought three times the amount of the $3,425,000 damages actually claimed. Challenged specifically was the validity of contracts between NBC's Blue network and affiliated stations in cities having less than four stations of comparable facilities.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—(AP)—War and tax clouds dampened recovery efforts in today's stock market and leading issues dipped fractions to a point or so.

The list looked as though it might put on a feeble rally in early dealings but bidders soon began to fade. While a few favorites managed to contest the shift with modest improvement, losers were well in the majority at the close.

Negative encouragement was derived from the fact volume inclined to dwindle on the downward drift. Transfers for the two hours were around 350,000 shares, one of the smallest turnovers for a Saturday since last November.

Bonds were mixed. Commodities advanced following the victory of the farm bloc in the senate on provisions of the price control law now being formulated.

propose that all nations enter the war.

But Enrique Ruiz Guinazu, foreign minister of Argentina, has hinted that Argentina will not agree and Oswaldo Aranha, foreign minister of Brazil, has declined to answer the direct question. Other South American nations have not committed themselves.

It seemed likely that the conference opening Thursday would produce at least a strong declaration reinforcing expressions of solidarity. New economic agreements guaranteeing the United States all the raw materials she needs and can obtain from South America also seemed probable.

Informed sources said it appeared that Argentina, Brazil and probably other nations felt that so long as the Americas were not directly attacked they could serve hemisphere defense better by remaining out of the fight.

Economic aid would be intensified while the United States would not be obliged to weaken its fleet by trying to protect the long coast lines of South America, now inadequately guarded.

Dynamic Young Juan B. Rossetti, foreign minister of Chile and a staunch friend of all-out inter-American collaboration, may offer a proposal that the Americas abolish customs barriers against each other for the duration and perhaps for good.

The Peruvian-Ecuadorean border dispute may be a ticklish subject at the conference. Ecuador wants to discuss it, Peru prefers not to.

Jefferson Caffery, U. S. ambassador to Brazil, predicted that the conference would bring "closer collaboration and more effective solidarity to American nations than ever before existed."

ST AID SAVES J. M. BUSBY, JR.

uth Rolls On Ground To Extinguish Flames After Explosion

he lessons in first aid which he rned from his father, Sergeant J. Busby of the Monroe police de- tment, yesterday were credited h saving the life of J. M. Busby, 17-year-old Ouachita Parish High ool student, whose clothing became ited as the result of a mysterious plosion while he was burning trash.

Young Busby was burning trash at e rear of his home, 207 Filhiol ave- e in Cole addition, about 2:30 p.m. terday when an explosion hurled bers of fire at the youth and set clothing ablaze. Flames leaped up ound him, but, remembering in- uctions in first aid taught him by father, the youth flung himself the ground and began rolling about yard until the flames were if ed out.

Although he was burned severely the right side of his face and all e hair was singed off his head, the uth's only other casualties were a oken pair of spectacles and a ruined it of clothes.

Cause of the explosion was never termined, Sergeant Busby reported, t fragments of burning trash were o hurled into a field at the rear the Busby home and firemen were mmoned to extinguish the grass fire at resulted in the 300 block of Mc- ire avenue.

Firemen also answered four other lls yesterday.

Efforts to thaw frozen water pipes ere blamed for a slight blaze at e home of H. H. Smith, 206 Mouton enue, and a defective chimney was id to have caused a fire at the me of B. L. George at Baucomville, miles west of here. Grass fires e extinguished at 2604 Gordon ave- and 1614 Fairview.

UNANIMOUS WAR MAY BE CALLED

propose that all nations enter the war.

But Enrique Ruiz Guinazu, foreign minister of Argentina, has hinted that Argentina will not agree and Oswaldo Aranha, foreign minister of Brazil, has declined to answer the direct question. Other South American nations have not committed themselves.

It seemed likely that the conference opening Thursday would produce at least a strong declaration reinforcing expressions of solidarity. New economic agreements guaranteeing the United States all the raw materials she needs and can obtain from South America also seemed probable.

Informed sources said it appeared that Argentina, Brazil and probably other nations felt that so long as the Americas were not directly attacked they could serve hemisphere defense better by remaining out of the fight.

Economic aid would be intensified while the United States would not be obliged to weaken its fleet by trying to protect the long coast lines of South America, now inadequately guarded.

Dynamic Young Juan B. Rossetti, foreign minister of Chile and a staunch friend of all-out inter-American collaboration, may offer a proposal that the Americas abolish customs barriers against each other for the duration and perhaps for good.

The Peruvian-Ecuadorean border dispute may be a ticklish subject at the conference. Ecuador wants to discuss it, Peru prefers not to.

Jefferson Caffery, U. S. ambassador to Brazil, predicted that the conference would bring "closer collaboration and more effective solidarity to American nations than ever before existed."

PLANS PROCEED FOR BIG PARTY

President's Ball On January 31 Promises To Be Successful

Plans are proceeding satisfactorily for the holding of the President's Ball at Cherokee terrace, Hotel Frances, on Saturday, January 31, stated David C. Carter, general arrangements chairman. He said that the committee which includes besides himself, Dr. Dee A. Strickland, H. B. Cannon and Otto Passman, is busily engaged in effecting details for the big event.

The Tech Collegians will be the orchestra to provide the music, this being one of the best to be secured in the south, Mr. Carter said.

Clarice and Goldah Roan School of the Dance will provide a floor show and this will be envolved in deep mystery, being designated as a most unique series of surprise numbers that will appeal to all the dancers, Mr. Carter assures.

There will be a huge birthday cake which has already been arranged for and which will be many tiers tall and will be brilliantly illuminated.

Tickets are already on sale. Miss Frances Jones has charge of the sale. Miss Frances Welch is to act as cashier and Robert Garrison will be at the door.

Money received will be devoted to charity, a large part going to aid the fund donated to aid sufferers from infantile paralysis.

'VICTORY BOOK' DRIVE PLANNED

Will Start On Monday; Men In Service To Be Given Volumes

A national "Victory Book" campaign sponsored by the American Library Association, American Red Cross and United Service Organizations begins on Monday, January 12. People throughout the land are urged to share the books they have enjoyed with our soldiers, sailors and marines. Ten million books are wanted for U. S. O. houses, army "dayrooms," ships, naval bases, etc.

Miss Frances Michie, parish librarian, will serve as chairman of the "Victory Book" campaign in Ouachita. All organizations are urged to cooperate in the campaign. Club women, service organizations, school, college and public librarians, home demonstration groups, ministers and church organizations, civilian defense councils, patriotic and fraternal organizations, chambers of commerce, civic, welfare, agricultural, educational and professional groups of all kinds, can give great assistance by distributing posters, collecting books, and helping sort and transport books.

All kinds of books are wanted—particularly up-to-date technical books, books on current affairs and plenty of good fiction.

Take your books to any of the libraries in the parish where they will be sorted, repaired if necessary, and later collected by United States army trucks to be distributed among the armed forces.

So give the boys good books—even those that you would like to keep—and "Keep 'Em Reading!"

RED CROSS IS EVER ON ALERT

Yeoman Service Is Being Rendered On Pacific Coast

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—(Special)—As the nation pepared for its fourth week of total war with the axis powers the American Red Cross, augmented by thousands of new volunteers, was ready on all fronts to meet the greatest emergency ever forced upon the United States.

Full reports from the Pacific told of yeoman service already rendered by the Red Coss Chapters and field workers under the direction of A. L. Schafer, manager of the Pacific area, during blackouts and in aiding civilian defense authorities.

When reports of Japanese bombers off the coast of California called for blackouts in Bremerton, Seattle, Portland, Sacramento, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Vallejo and San Diego, Red Cross disaster relief first aid squads and motor corps were the first relief workers in action.

In Los Angeles 3,000 men and women volunteers of the reserve corps first aiders were on the alert, working in close cooperation with authorities of the naval area.

Plans for the evacuation of children from the San Francisco Bay area had already been formulated by Red Cross chapters throughout the vicinity, and all chapters placed themselves on a 24-hour-basis, prepared for any conceivable happening.

The San Francisco chapter of the American Red Cross was working hand-in-hand with the civilian defense council. The city had been divided into 100 precincts, each with an evacuation leader, each augmented an evacuation leader, each augmented by a corps of trained Red Cross workers.

Meanwhile, DeWitt Smith, director of domestic operations, strengthened the Pacific personnel by transferring 20 experienced first aid instructors from the midwestern area office to the Pacific office where they immediately joined forces with local field workers.

In Boston, Harold E. Pomeroy, director of the first corps area, Red Cross disaster field office, helped local leaders speed the completion of a plan which may well be the foundation for Red Cross organizational work throughout the country.

The plan was the fruition of long study by Red Cross leaders and needed no real war test to prove its efficiency.

Addressing New England's 240 Red Cross chapters, Mr. Pomeroy issued a call to "alert" for all workers.

Prince Valiant
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAROLD R FOSTER
BOLTAR
Synopsis: PRINCE VALIANT TAKES PASSAGE WITH BOLTAR, THE VIKING, BOUND FOR THE NORTHLANDS AND THE COURT OF KING ARTHUR. WESTWARD ACROSS THE BLUE MEDITERRANEAN THEY SAIL, TRADING AND PLUNDERING MERRILY UNTIL THEY REACH THE PILLARS OF HERCULES (GIBRALTAR). THERE THEY HEAR RUMORS OF GOLD, AND, FORGETTING THEIR HOMES, THEY TURN SOUTH.
FAIR WINDS CARRY THEM UP THE COAST OF AFRICA. THEY SUFFER MUCH FROM THIRST, FOR THERE IS BUT LITTLE WATER ALONG THIS BURNING, SANDY COAST.
THEN ONE DAY THE WIND DIES, THE HEAT IS STIFLING AND OMINOUS CLOUDS GATHER OVER THE FAR SAHARA SANDS.
AS IF ALL THE SCREAMING FIENDS OF THE LOWER WORLD, THE STORM RUSHES DOWN UPON THEM. NO MAN CAN FACE THE WIND, FOR IT IS FILLED WITH STINGING SAND. THEIR MAST SNAPS LIKE A DRY REED!
ONE HALF THE CREW GRASP THE OARS AND STRIVE TO KEEP THE SHIP HEADED TO THE GALE. THE OTHERS BAIL LIKE MAD AND HEAVE THE BALLAST OVERBOARD.
THEY ARE DRIVEN FAR OUT ON THE UNKNOWN OCEAN ERE THE STORM SPENDS ITSELF.........THEN, FAINTLY THROUGH THE STILL DUST-FILLED AIR, THEY SEE A SNOW-CAPPED MOUNTAIN RISING FROM THE SEA.
EAGERLY THEY PULL TOWARD THIS PROMISE OF REST AND FRESH WATER......
......BUT AS THEY BEACH THEIR SHIP, A PACK OF MONSTROUS DOGS LINES THE SHORE, FANGS GLEAMING.
THEY HAVE LANDED ON AN ISLAND PARADISE INHABITED BY DEMONS! AND THEIR SEARCH FOR WATER IS LIKE A HOWLING NIGHTMARE. BY ACCIDENT BOLTAR HAS RE-DISCOVERED THE "ISLE OF CANINES", OR AS THEY ARE NOW KNOWN, THE CANARY ISLANDS.
NEXT WEEK – The Unknown Land.
